Saanich Stalemate Slammed

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Greater Victoria industrial development commissioner Barry Mayhew departed from his usual non-political stance Tuesday by calling for the defeat of four "obstructionist" Saanich aldermen at the earliest opportunity.

Mayhew said until the four — John Mika, Howard Sturrock, Irene Block and Mary Casilio — are defeated, there will be no significant economic growth in the municipality.

"The four automatically oppose every development proposal, no matter how reasonable it is," he said.

"Saanich council will be stalemated as long as they are there. People who want economic development in Saanich should vote them out of office."

Mayhew made the statement in a speech to the Victoria Electric Club at the Crest Harbourview Inn.

He said his remarks were made "out of frustration — the obstruction of Saanich council is one of the frustrations I face in my job."

Mayhew said he normally does not make political statements but felt the time had come to speak out because all his efforts in Saanich are being thwarted by the inactivity of Saanich council.

Particularly disappointing, he said, was the defeat of the Royal Oak and Interurban Road industrial park proposals, plus the litigation holding up the Minnie Mountain housing project in Ten Mile Point.

Mayhew said the four aldermen automatically oppose any devlopment proposal.

"Saanich council is completely stalemated."

Mayhew did not name the aldermen during his speech but in an interview later he said he would not hesitate to do so.

"I was referring to John Mika, of course, he is the main obstructionist. And I was also referring to Irene Block, Howard Sturrock and Mary Casilio. They vote as a group and they are against everything."

He said the other four aldermen, Geoff Vantreight, Fred Severson, Dave Paterson and Sandy Noel, bring forward development ideas but each one is blocked by the anti-development faction.

He said Mika and the other three aldermen insist that all decisions must be subject to local veto.

Mayhew said there are times when issues are so important to a large number of people that the wishes of local citizens have to be overridden for the benefit of the whole community.

He said the anti-development bloc refuses to accept this principle and that is what led to the defeat of the Royal Oak industrial park.

During his speech, Mayhew said he was concentrating on bringing basic industries to Victoria. These are industries that export goods and bring new money into the community.

Most of Victoria's industries are in the service sector and they merely circulate money that is already here. It was important to bring in new money with non-polluting, high technology industries and that is why obtaining an industrial park site is so important.

An existing industrial zone of 14 acres behind the Red Lion Inn has land for sale at $14 a square foot, compared with less than $2 a square foot for similar land in Richmond and Surrey, he said.

The Victoria land is so expensive because there are few industrial sites here. The price will stay high until additional industrial parks are opened. Then land prices would fall because of the competition and more companies would be interested in coming here.

May 10 Vote in B.C.

BURGER OUTLET boost for Bill Bennett appears on sign on Douglas Street fast food outlet but owner Bob Beadnell says he just put it up for a lark. Beadnell says sign, being pointed to by passerby Ken Chubbe, is strictly for laughs and he doesn't anticipate losing any customers who may not share sign's sentiments. One NDP critic said sign's a real hot dog effort.

Premier Bill Bennett ended months of speculation Tuesday when he went on television to call a May 10 provincial election.

The vote comes just 12 days before the federal election.

Bennett, who had asked for five minutes of live television and radio coverage to make his announcement, ended up taking close to half an hour with a rambling, election-style speech in which he said it is time to redefine the philosophical differences between his party and the NDP.

See also page 17.

The 38-day campaign will be fought on B.C.'s right to manage its own resources and private versus public ownership, the premier said.

NDP leader Dave Barrett, who said he welcomes the election call, said his party sees the issues as unemployment, inflation and the cost of living — all things the party feels Bennett has failed to solve.

Bennett dismissed suggestions parallel federal and provincial campaigns would cause confusion for the voters.

But NDP house leader Bill King (Revelstoke-Slocan) said Bennett is using the federal campaign as a smokescreen to confuse voters in hopes of picking up extra votes.

At dissolution, the Social Credit party held 34 seats, the NDP 18 and the Conservatives one. There were two vacant seats in the 55 seat legislature.

The new house will see 57 MLAs representing 51 ridings because of the changes in electoral boundaries approved by the legislature last spring.

Bennett's Socreds overthrew the 3½ year old NDP government in December, 1975, by picking up 49 per cent of the popular vote to the NDP's 39 per cent.

The Liberals and Tories together shared about 11 per cent of the vote.

Barrett, who was in Juneau speaking about his plan for a rail link through B.C. to Alaska, said Tuesday night the campaign can end the feeling of frustration and helplessness that prevails in B.C.

The NDP leader said B.C. needs leadership, vision and determination as well as a declaration that its premier will fight for all the people, not just the millionaires.

Bennett said there are indications the federal government wants more control over economic development and revenues from provincial resources.

"I would resist very strongly, on behalf of the people, any attempt by any government of any label in Ottawa to take over the resources of the people of B.C.," Bennett said.

He claimed that Barrett, while premier, had offered to relinquish control of B.C.'s resources if the federal government would bring them under national control.

"I believe the people of this province must make a decision on who is going to manage B.C. — whether it is going to be managed from Victoria, or Ottawa," Bennett said.

"Those who would turn over our resources, or those who would take them, must be given a clear message — the B.C. resources belong to the people of B.C."

Conservative leader Vic Stephens, his party's lone MLA, said he is delighted with the election call.

He sees his party like the Socreds in 1952 under W.A.C. Bennett coming from nowhere to form the government.

"If voters in B.C. were willing to do that once, they could well do it again," he said.

Stephens said the Socred claim of good fiscal management is a joke.

"They are the biggest spending, highest taxing government in the history of the province," he said, adding the government's $1.56 billion budget introduced Monday simply gave back to the people things that had been taken from them.

Bennett hinted strongly that if the people want to ensure they receive all the goodies in the budget, they had better return the Socred government to power.

The premier warned there's no telling what another government might do to the reduction in sales tax, increase in homeowner's grant and other tax benefits promised in the budget.

Barrett Rejects Terms

Williams resigned his Vancouver East seat in 1976 so Barrett could get re-elected in a byelection.

Barrett, asked about Bennett's conditional challenge, said the premier is afraid to face him one-to-one.

The premier claims Williams is still a power in the NDP backrooms and has claimed in recent weeks that Kinnaird is the real leader of the NDP.

Barrett said he would love to meet the premier face-to-face but with no preconditions.

"If the premier is afraid to meet me face-to-face, let him say so."

Asked later if he is afraid to meet Barrett alone, Bennett said he was giving Barrett the opportunity to have a three-to-one advantage.

"He (Barrett) shouldn't come into the debate alone because I am not confident he understands BCRIC (the free share giveaway in the B.C. Resources Investment Corp.) from his conflicting statements."

Williams said he can't understand why he has been invited because he is now a private citizen, not a politician.

"The last thing I want to do is try and get into the maze of the premier's mind."

The former resources minister said he has no intention of seeking a seat this time around.

NDP House leader Bill King suggested tongue-in-cheek that Bennett bring along Bob Sommers and Jack Davis. Both are former Social Credit cabinet ministers who have been convicted of criminal offences.

Davis resigned his seat in September, but has since won re-nomination.

Audits Urged For Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — A royal commission has recommended that the government submit annual five-year financial plans to Parliament as a first step in fighting a "grave weakening in the chain of accountability" within the government and to taxpayers.

The Royal Commission on Financial Management and Accountability concluded in its final report, released Tuesday, that control over government spending is so ineffective it poses a serious threat to the economy.

The inquiry was set up by Prime Minister Trudeau in 1976 after Auditor-General J.J. Macdonell warned: "Parliament — and indeed the government — has lost or is close to losing effective control of the public purse."

The commission, headed by Allen Lambert, 68-year old former chairman of the Toronto Dominion Bank, offers an equally harsh indictment:

"After two years of careful study and consideration, we have reached the deeply held conviction that the serious malaise pervading the management of government stems fundamentally from a grave weakening, and in some cases an almost total breakdown in the chain of accountatility, first within the government and second in the accountability of government to Parliament and utlimately to the Canadian people."

The 586-page report calls for a major restructuring of the government and the initiation of medium-term fiscal plans to help regain control over the spending and management of some 400 federal departments and agencies. The commission makes 165 recommendations.

French Power Now Accepted - Trudeau

Times-News Services

Prime Minister Trudeau tried to reassure Quebecers Tuesday night in Rimouski that "French power" is finally being accepted across the country and the province should not feel forced to leave Confederation.

(More federal campaign reports on page 47).

The Liberals fared badly in the 1972 federal election campaign because English Canadians "believed there was too much French power," Trudeau recalled.

Although the Liberals won the 1972 election, they did badly outside Quebec and formed a minority government.

But now English Canadians are willing to give French equal status to English, and some premiers have agreed to enshrine linguistic rights in the constitution, he said.

In the Creditiste stronghold of Eastern Quebec Trudeau wound up offending some of the rural voters he was courting.

A remark Trudeau made about "grumbling" farmers earned him the first boos of his Quebec campaign at a junior college in the riding of Kamouraska-Riviere-du-Loup.

Meanwhile, also campaigning in Quebec, Conservative leader Joe Clark said Tuesday that Trudeau had helped foster separatist sentiments in the province.

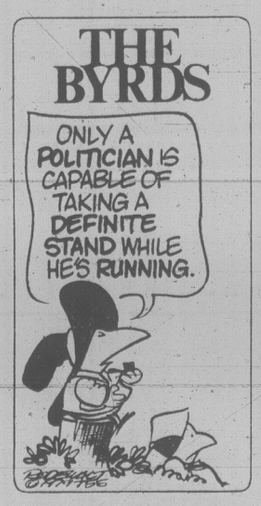
In two television interviews during a day-long election campaign visit here, Clark said he thinks Trudeau made it tougher for federalist forces to mount a campaign against the Parti Quebecois referendum on independence expected in the fall.

The Progressive Conservative leader described Trudeau as "the odd man out" in the history of Canada. All prime ministers had some trouble dealing with premiers but Trudeau had fought all 27 premiers he dealt with during his 11 years in office.

NDP Leader Ed Broadbent issued an election pitch to women in Edmonton Tuesday with a proposal that would impose hiring quotas on government and employers getting government business.

The New Democratic Party leader also called for reinstatement of $3 million in annual job-related services to women that the Liberal government recently cut and proposed other measures to propell women to equality in the work force.

Broadbent announced his election pledges at a news conference after a speech and question-and-answer session at the University of Alberta.



Bhutto Hanging Sparks Rioting

Times News Services

RAWALPINDI — Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, who ruled Pakistan for five turbulent years and refused to beg for his life after his overthrow, was hanged for 30 obligatory minutes today and quickly buried by the military regime.

Bloody riots broke out in India's Kashmir province and club-swinging police broke up groups of angry, chanting demonstrators in the streets here hours after the hanging.

A spokesman for Canadian Pakistanis said in Toronto the hanging of Bhutto will set an example for politicians in that part of the world.

"If they misuse the powers of state, they should be prepared for the consequences," said Haider Khan, president of the Federation of Pakistani Associations.

Socreds To Lose TV Time

Premier Bill Bennett's TV time on CBC Tuesday to announce the May 10 provincial election will be deducted from the Socred party's free time campaign coverage by the station.

Director Len Lauk said the premier's 21-minute statement was partisan in nature and therefore the first political broadcast of the campaign.

In the interests of fairness and balance, the time taken should be deducted from the party's overall coverage, he said.

The premier went live on both CBC and B.C. Television at 6 p.m., the normal starting time for the evening newscasts by both networks.

The premier's office had indicated that the election statement would only take five minutes and because he spoke for more than 20 minutes, the stations' normal scheduling was disrupted.

Lauk said the 15-minute difference between projected and actual time taken by the premier was "unusual."

"I'm sure it was inadvertant."

Asked why he took so long, Bennett replied: "I've never called an election before."

Ingrid Bergman, who has already won three Oscars, could become the first person to win four if she is named best actress on April 9 for her performance in Autumn Sonata.

Bergman has long been a sentimental favorite in Hollywood and her nomination makes the guessing difficult for those entering the annual Times-VI90 Academy Award contest. Contestants who correctly predict the Oscar winners for best actress, best actor and best picture will be entered for a chance to win a trip to Hollywood or five major runner-up prizes.

Budget Items In Limbo

The provincial election May 10 places all except one of the Social Credit budget promises into limbo until the next government is formed.

Premier Bill Bennett said Tuesday the reduction of the sales tax to four per cent from five remains effective throughout the election campaign and until such time as it is changed.

It is expected that if the Social Credit government is re-elected, it will pass a law retroactive to midnight April 2, the date the lower tax went into effect.

All other budget items — a $100 increase in homeowner grants, reductions in in tax assessments of reserve farmland, cuts in personal income tax, tax deductions to attract investment in B.C. firms and increases in welfare payments promised in Monday's budget speech — must wait for a new government to turn them into law.

Some items do not demand the government's immediate attention — property owners do not need homeowner grants until tax notices are sent out in July.

Distribution of five free shares of B.C. Resources Investment Corp. to every eligible citizen in the province does not begin until August, when the government is expected to pay agencies handling applications the remaining half of the $5 they receive for processing each application.

Following dissolution of the house by proclamation Tuesday night, all MLAs with the exception of cabinet ministers were taken off the payroll.

Bennett Calls Vote

Bennett said he believes the distribution of the five free shares in the B.C. Resources Invesment Corporation to every eligible British Columbian is an election issue.

The premier claimed the NDP if elected, would block the share distribution although the NDP has repeatedly denied this.

Barrett, who objected to the program when it was first announced, has since said the distribution has already gone too far and the NDP would go along with the share give-away.

But Bennett said the distribution, which has already cost B.C. taxpayers more than $3 million, is reversible.

"Here we have a philosophical difference and if he (Barrett) says he's only worried about the money, then principles and philosophy should mean more than money," he said.

Bennett said the election is a chance for socialists to stand up for socialism.

"Why should they be embarrassed about it? They oppose it (the BCRIC scheme), they believe in government ownership, and it is a clear-cut opportunity for them to state the case for government ownership versus individual ownership. It is an issue — it's a prime issue."

Bennett told a news conference after his election announcement that he believes his government's chance of being re-elected is about 50-50.

But he refused to comment on the Conservatives' election chances.

A recent Tory poll show the party climbing to 17 or 18 per cent of the popular vote.

Bennett said he believes his party and the NDP are running neck and neck although the same Tory poll had the NDP six point favorites over the Socreds.

Troops Race Into Kampala

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Tanzanian troops raced into Uganda's virtually defenceless capital of Kampala from three sides today in a drive to overthrow President Idi Amin and his regime, one of the most brutal in recent African history.

Abandoned by his Libyan allies, Amin reportedly was in Jinja, 40 miles from Kampala, when the decisive battle began.

"The final assault has begun," leaders of the new government-in-exile, the Ugandan National Liberation Front, declared.

They reported the attacking army had overrun Kampala's infamous Makindye military barracks and prison — reputedly the site of hundreds of torturings and executions during Amin's dictatorial eight-year rule — and said the rest of the capital could fall within hours.

Diplomats in Kampala said the hundreds of troops from Libya who had provided Kampala's last line of real defense fled the Ugandan capital after suffering heavy casualties in a battle with the advancing army — 20,000 Tanzanian troops and Ugandan exiles plus thousands of deserters from Amin's forces.

The diplomats, who were situated in the centre of the capital, said it was deserted tonight, with a dusk-to-dawn curfew in force. They heard shooting from the south, but were unable to add to the reports by the Ugandan rebel leaders, who said their battlefield information had been confirmed from the front.

Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy, who saw the five-month war in Uganda as a battle between his Moslem ally, Amin, and Christian-led rebels, sent up to 2,000 soldiers to Uganda.

Pity Poor Posties

British Columbians are facing a spring bumper crop of multi-hued lawn posters and all manner of related hoopla advertising more than 300 provincial and federal candidates in two May general elections.

Voters in the province may be forgiven for some confusion when they actually get down to the business of voting, with the provincial election May 10, followed by the federal election May 22.

Postmen, already gearing to handle mailed promotional material for candidates in 28 B.C. federal ridings — an increase of five because of redistribution since the last general election — now have the prospect of lugging literature for aspirants in the 57 provincial ridings.

The advertising campaign might be particularly heavy in the Vancouver area because the city's two major daily newspapers have been shut down by a contract dispute since Nov. 1, 1978.

The last time federal and provincial general elections were held in the same month in B.C. was 1949, and coincidentally, were separated by the same number of days — 12 — as this year.

Student Spots Forgotten Original Oil

An oil painting which hung almost unnoticed in the office of a private girls' school for about 10 years may be a Group of Seven original by Frederick Varley, says the principal of Ontario Ladies College in Whitby. Reginald Davis said the painting, a Northern Ontario landscape, has been sent to the Art Gallery of Ontario in Toronto for verification after it was discovered by Stacey Ridgeley, 18. Miss Ridgely, a Grade 13 student, noticed that the technique used in the painting was similar to some Group of Seven works and informed her art teacher.

The Peace Bridge, a 51-year-old span linking Fort Erie, Ont., with Buffalo, N.Y., across the Niagara River is a tribute to peaceful relations between Canada and the United States. But it maysbe the site of a weekend duel — a messy one at that. Banana cream pies will be the weapons and TV personalities will be the duellers. Gene Taylor, who has a weekly comedy show on the CBC's Channel 5 in Toronto, challenged Barry Lillis, Buffalo's Channel 2 weatherman, to the duel at high noon Saturday. Taylor says Lillis welched on an agreement to wear a Toronto Maple Leafs T-shirt if Toronto beat Buffalo Sabres last Sunday, which they did. But Lillis says he couldn't find a Leafs shirt.

A televison commercial says you can get a Toyota "for a song," so Cheryl Hyland thought she'd try it. She walked into Lynch Toyota in Manchester, Conn., and sang Happy Birthday to puzzled sales manager William Lockwood. Neither Lockwood nor owner Michael Lynch had seen the commercial. Lynch called a Hartford television station, heard the ad and then called Toyota's U.S. headquarters in New Jersey. He was told the phrase "for a song" is used as a slang expression and has been cleared by company lawyers. But Lynch, ever the smiling salesman, promised to check further. "If you've got a car coming, then you've got a car coming," he told Ms. Hyland.

When Frank Sinatra flies, he doesn't fly coach — so why shouldn't he go first class when he does a concert? He's the Easter weekend headliner at the Resorts International Hotel in Atlantic City, N.J., and he won't be the only star on the stage. He demanded, and got, a $48,000 Bosendorfer Imperial grand piano to back up his vocals. The 9-foot-6-inch ivory and mahogany instrument boasts nine extra keys in the bass line and is beloved by a diversity of performers ranging from Oscar Petersen to Phyllis Diller. But probably the most famed devotee of the Bosendorfer was Franz Liszt. It's said it was the only model that could absorb his impassioned pounding.

How the story of an Italian kid from Brooklyn who finds happiness in a disco can be "linked to the Zionist cause" is anybody's guess, but that's how censors in Abu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates, see it. They've slapped John Travolta's Saturday Night Fever on the blacklist, along with the televison series Love Boat. Also banned are Phil Silvers and Steve Allen, but at least in their cases, the censors are explicit about the motive. Says Dubai's Boycott of Israel office, "They're American Jews and believed to be active in the Zionist movement."

Grid superstar O.J. Simpson has decided to be a movie producer now, and the first film by his Orenthal Productions is titled Goldie and the Boxer. It's the story of a heavyweight contender who wins the championship — under the management of a 10-year-old girl. He plays the heavyweight and Goldie is played by Melissa Michaelsen who's making her debut.

A provincial court judge Tuesday declined an invitation from the Edmonton director of the Canadian Association to Liberate Marijuana to share a marijuana cigarette with him. "Eventually we will prove the law is unjust and when that day comes I will buy you a beer and smoke a joint with you," Donald Buchan, 40, told Judge Dean Saks. "I doubt you will do that," the judge replied as he sentenced Buchan to one month in jail for possession of a narcotic. Buchan had pleaded guilty to the charge.

Tammy Lauren of ABC's Angie has been signed to star in Walt Disney Productions' The Last Flight of Noah's Ark. She will star with Elliott Gould, Genevieve Bujold and Ricky Schroder of The Champ. In the story their plane — which includes a menagerie of animals — crashes on a South Pacific island — deserted except for two Japanese sailors stranded there since the Second World War. They turn a wrecked bomber aircraft into a modern Noah's Ark in an attempt to escape the island.

Warm Welcome for Chilled Charles

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Prince Charles, sporting an Australian tan in the -22 C chill of this northern community, basked in the warmth Tuesday of the locals who know him affectionately as Charlie.

"I feel that I know the Northwest Territories probably better than any other part of Canada," the prince said at the opening of a $6-million museum of northern culture named in his honor.

On his previous two visits, Prince Charles endeared himself to Northerners with his affable manner and a taste for adventure that saw him gamely sample a slice of raw seal and dive beneath the Arctic ice in a heavily-insulated wetsuit.

However, the most taxing task his northern hosts had in store for his one-day stay in Yellowknife was the official opening of the Prince of Wales Northern Heritage Centre and a gala black-tie dinner that was the social highlight of the capital's long winter.

The banquet was an adults-only affair, but the day was for children.

Later, Prince Charles strode through a crowd of 200 to the stand where he cut the ribbon dedicating the heritage centre.

The ceremony was brief. The crowd stamped their feet to keep warm in the sunny but windy subzero temperatures. A television technician cursed a frozen videotape recorder. The teen-aged members of the Yellowknife Band managed to tootle out the opening bars of God Save the Queen with stiff lips and fingers before rushing inside to thaw out.

At a reception following a tour of the centre, the prince chatted with guests including Nicholas and John McClintock, grandsons of Sir Francis Leopold, the man who discovered the fate of the Franklin expedition.

Mayor Fred Henne presented the prince a wafer of gold from the nearby Con mine, while Chief Johnny Charlie of Fort McPherson gave him a beaded belt.

At the evening banquet, Stuart Hodgson, retiring commissioner of the Northwest Territories, unveiled the portrait of Prince Charles that will be displayed in the foyer of the centre.

Beer-Can Bomb Hijacker Killed

SYDNEY (AP) — Police fatally shot a would-be hijacker today when he tried to set off a beer can full of gunpowder aboard a Pan American jumbo jet, authorities said.

The hijacker, identified as Dimicias Speranzo, held a woman at knifepoint for more than two hours before releasing her. She suffered minor throat cuts and shock.

A policeman who tried to rescue her was stabbed in the head but was reported in satisfactory condition.

Police said Speranzo, a 31-year-old Italian immigrant carpenter, demanded to be flown from Australia to Italy for meetings with Pope John Paul II and Communist leader Enrico Berlinguer and then on to Moscow.

Speranzo was taken from Sydney International Airport to Royal Prince Henry Hospital were he died several hours later while undergoing surgery.

The shooting ended a four-hour siege at the Sydney Airport that began when the man grabbed a nurse checking in for a flight to New Zealand for her brother's wedding. Holding a knife to her throat, he dragged her aboard a Boeing 747 that arrived 15 minutes before from Los Angeles and was waiting empty for passengers and crew for a return flight in 75 minutes.

Special anti-hijack squads sealed off the airport and the plane. They began negotiations with the man, and he released his terrified hostage after more than two hours. She was suffering from minor throat cuts and shock.

Police Supt. Jack McNeil told a news conference that after the man released the woman, he produced two beer can bombs with protruding wicks. He said detectives were negotiating with the man in the cabin when he ducked behind a seat and tried to light the fuse on one of the cans.

McNeil said one of the detectives then fired two shots at the man. He said the decision to shoot the man was taken after an attempt to flush him out of the plane with high-pressure hoses failed, and he became irrational.

Another election call

Premier Bill Bennett is certainly right in one reason he gave for calling a provincial election now: the fact that "election fever" is making the legislative process in B.C. even more inefficient than usual. Since Bennett made it clear last fall that he was considering a quick election, politicians from all three B.C. parties have devoted much more time and energy to election preparation and to scoring political Brownie points than to getting "the people's business" done.

Had Bennett backed away from the idea for a second time after whipping the fever up with his Monday budget, the atmosphere would doubtless have remained so emotionally charged that it would have been practically impossible to hold any rational political debate for the rest of the Socreds' term in office.

Instead Bennett has chosen the only true cure for election fever — a quick election. Despite the overlap with the federal campaign, he dissolved the legislature to begin a 38-day provincial campaign.

Indeed, the premier has already made it clear that he intends to make use of the federal election as part of his own campaign. One of the two main issues on which he would like to fight is federal-provincial relations; he wants a mandate from the voters to continue battling for strong provincial rights, especially in the area of natural resources.

An interesting sideline to this theme is that it automatically ties Bennett to the federal Conservatives. It is Joe Clark who is preaching the maintenance and expansion of provincial rights, Pierre Trudeau who is suggesting that a strong Canada may sometimes require subjugation of those provincial rights in the national interest.

This won't hurt Bennett much with the voters since the Tories are much more popular than the Liberals in B.C. anyway. It could, however, hurt him in obtaining workers and help. The Socreds are a coalition of federal Liberals and federal Conservatives, but, with a federal campaign on, he may find it hard to keep Liberal workers when he is campaigning so strongly against their federal policies.

Bennett's second major campaign theme — his unique scheme to give away five shares in the B.C. Resources Investment Corporation to every British Columbian — is more pointedly directed at his NDP opponents. It is the specific example he intends to use to fight the hoary old B.C. election battle of "free enterprise versus state ownership."

To a large degree the debate will be academic. Although Bennett is already warning that the New Democrats would take everybody's five shares away, the NDP keeps repeating it would allow the share distribution scheme to proceed.

It remains, nonetheless, a good philosophic issue for debate because the NDP remains opposed to the principle of the giveaway and would let it proceed only because so much money has already been spent. The issue does reflect well the essential split between the two parties. Bennett would be well advised to concentrate on that philosophic difference rather than beat a drum that the NDP has already punctured.

The NDP has not yet been specific about the issues it will press during the campaign, but party House leader Bill King has said that key economic points — inflation, unemployment, and the high cost of living — will be a big part of the party's campaign. It's virtually certain that the NDP will recall the Socreds' 1975 campaign promise to "get B.C. moving again," then point out that unemployment and inflation are as high as ever.

In large part that is not the Socreds' fault. It wasn't the NDP's fault, either, that the economy began to fall apart in the last year of its reign, though it had to take the blame. Such is the political game.

Conservative leader Vic Stephens has been even less specific about the main themes of his campaign. He clearly intends to try to capitalize on the strong support for the federal Tories in B.C. He talks glowingly of the co-operation that could be achieved between a federal Tory government and a provincial Tory government.

Stephens is definitely right about one thing. He says that in the end the key issues of the election will be decided not by Bennett nor by any political party but by the voters themselves.

In some form, the key factor to voters will be the performance of the Socreds for the past 39 months compared to the performance of the Barrett government during its 39 months in office. Will the voters' memories of the tax increases and extra costs imposed by the Socreds in the past three years be erased by the promises of tax cuts and new giveaways in the latest Socred budget? Do the voters think the NDP learned anything from its 1975 defeat, particularly anything about the need for good management as well as good ideas?

Have they become so cynical that they no longer believe any party can do much about improving the economy? If so, on what basis will they decide to vote?

The answers to these questions should start becoming clear in the next 38 days.

RICHARD GWYN

No charisma, but sincere

KITCHENER, Ont. — We all owe Mrs. Linda Townend a huge debt. She has put an end to the need for any more earnest and turgid but at the same time fair, balanced, objective, on the one hand this-ish and on the hand that-ish, analysis about what this election is all about.

"There's the nub of the election", remarked a Joe Clark aide after listening to Mrs. Townend cope with reporters who had glommed onto her as if a guru. The nub. The core. The imminent essence of the election.

Mrs. Townend came by her role as Articulate Average Voter by accident. She had, you see, lost an earring. A gold one. She lost it while mucking out a stall. A stall in which she raises "Arabians," which meant, as a couple of dullard reporters had to have explained to them, Arabian horses.

Met Clark's wife

To replace this earring, Mrs. Townend, an interior decorator, attractive, stylish, and at a guess in her mid-30s, went to a gold sale at the Eaton's store in Kitchener. And there, by the perfume counter, she met Maureen McTeer. Maneuvering around Maureen like an ill-disciplined honor guard were the media.

Maureen McTeer, who you remember is just a month past her 27th birthday, is a superb campaigner. She is poised, natural and direct. She neither talks down to people, nor, as always is far worse, talks up to them in a simpering, political wifey way. She's adroit also. She orchestrates her encounters with people so that the local candidate, in this instance John Reimer, shares centre stage with her.

There, by the perfume counter, Mrs. Townend shook Maureen's hand and John Reimer's. Some pleasantries, and then Mrs. Townend said she wanted to tell Maureen her two wishes.

First, that Clark, for whom she intended to vote after having supported Pierre Trudeau these past three elections, would win. Second: "And I say this as a liberated working woman," that Maureen McTeer would change her name to Maureen Clark.

"You'll get your first wish I promise you, but not," a smile but a definite shake of that mass of curls, "your second."

More pleasantries. Maureen McTeer moved on. We stayed.

Remarkably composed, since after all it isn't every time you drop into an Eaton's store that you find yourself surrounded by two television cameras, four microphones and half a dozen handheld notebooks, Mrs. Townend explained she favored wives taking their husbands' names for the sake of "identification" with their children. Still, she didn't regard it as any big deal either way.

We were about to leave, to resume our stations around Maureen McTeer, when one reporter asked Mrs. Townend why she had switched from Trudeau to Clark.

MAUREEN McTEER
. . . she won't change her name

"I'm tired of charisma. It's time for a new start, and I just hope that Clark will turn out to be the man we hope he is."

We scribbled this down. Then another reporter had an idea. Did she mean, therefore, that Clark was innocent of charisma?

"He certainly isn't charismatic. But I do think he's very sincere."

There you have the nut, the core, the imminent essence of this electio. For Mrs. Townend, as probably for millions of other Canadians, the charisma of Pierre Trudeau has run its course. Yet in Joe Clark she invests no more than a "hope" that he will "turn out to be the man we hope he is." For a start, he is at least "sincere."

The reason this election is so unsatisfactory, is somehow sour, is that it adds up to a double negative. A political equivalent of "I don't know nothing." Do you vote to stop Trudeau from continuing to be prime minister, or to stop Clark from attaining the job?

Clark knows perfectly well that his real opponent is not Trudeau but himself. (So does Trudeau, which is why he spends most of his time attacking Clark instead of promoting himelf.)

Nub of the election

Clark's objective thus is a limited one — to convince enough Canadians to "hope" he will measure up to the job if given it.

Precisely because his goal is so limited — no visions, no resonant rhetoric, no cult of personality — Clark may very well attain it. He speaks to the press just long enough to prevent reporters from complaining that he doesn't speak to them. Unlike Trudeau, who stands alone on the platform beind a microphone, Clark speaks from behind a dais which helps hide his awkward hand gestures. His speeches never soar, but he does move them along effectively enough with workmanlike lines like "We are a country of adventurers" and "Canadians have earned a stake in their own country." And he radiates sincerity.

Usually, you only play a "no errors" game when you're ahead. Clark is playing it because, although he's behind in the polls, he's ahead in psychology. Outside of Quebec, most Canadians have decided it's time for a change. Many of them, at this point probably still a majority, haven't yet decided whether they dare "hope" Clark will be up to the job.

That's the nub of what the next seven weeks is about. Thank you Mrs. Townend. I'm glad you lost your earring.

Aboriginal peoples

The white man always asks the same
And makes his paper fuss,
'Why don't you drop those Indian claims
Why can't you be like us?'
Why don't you get a job, they say
Why don't you? Why? Why? Why?
But in their hearts we hear them say
'Why don't you people die.'

Thusly wrote Father Muller of the plight of the Cree caught up in the James Bay Hydro project in Quebec, in his poem of a book, Waswanipi.

Project North in Victoria and on Vancouver Island have been sponsoring talks and films by the leaders of several aboriginal Indian groups recently in this area. These meetings have had a large attendance and the many who came and listened and obtained and read the various literature made available by these aboriginal groups, must in some way be more informed than before. They must also feel some of the sentiments expressed by Father Muller, when they heard Chief Jim Antoine of the Dene, members of the Nishga council and members of other Indian associations, explain the deceptions perpetrated continuously by all levels of governments in their efforts to forestall any proper and humane land claims settlements with the aboriginal peoples of Canada.

The Nishga have been approaching all levels of government for 100 years, and other groups nearly as long. The joint meetings conducted by these groups nation-wide, starting March 15, is the first time the aboriginal peoples of Canada have combined their efforts. Their purpose is to bring out to the many other races which represent Canadians, the situations they find themselves in and their hope that we other Canadians will exert pressure on the powers that be to at last sit down and deliver to these groups their just and humane wishes for self determination of their respective areas. I would ask those who are interested and do not know what Project North is, or who would wish material of these groups to write to Mrs. Mavis Gillie, 4217 Granville St. Victoria or to A. M. Jardine, 3478 Salsbury Way, Victoria. The audiences of the various meetings will recall the various Indian speakers' request, that they endeavor to bring the group's message to as many as possible and those who can should contact all forms of the media, MPs and MLAs. Unless we do redress this tragic situation we can hardly legitimately point a finger at South Africa and other like repressive governments, can we? — Don D. Fraser, 1161 West Burnside.

Sample this

I'm doing research for a proposed book about Canadian samplers, pieces of needlework, actually embroidery, done on canvas by young girls. Generally they have the ABCs, a poem or verse as well as the girl's name, age and even location.

I'm anxious to learn about samplers worked in Canada, as I hope to include examples from the from the whole country. But, probably because I'm in Ontario, I've had a difficult time learning about pieces in the western provinces, even though I've contacted museums and historical societies. So, almost as a last ditch effort, I'w writing to you in the hopes that you might offer some help.

I'm most anxious to learn about Canadian samplers, worked especially in western Canada, in both private collections, or, those that have descended in the family. I undertake to keep all replies confidential, to give proper credit as directed by the owners, and pay expenses of having photographs taken, copies etc., etc. — Hyla Fox, 114 Bombay Avenue, Downsview, Ont. Mountain goat at Glacier, B.C. with Swiss mountain guides.

Getting the goats

Stewart Lang, in his column of Feb. 23 (Mountain Goat Herd Would Help Research), strongly supports the proposal to introduce mountain goats to Vancouver Island.

The reasons for this proposed introduction are not clear to us. The mountain goat has never been native to Vancouver Island, so that the transplant would not lead to re-establishing a lost species. Such a transplant might be a good conservation measure if the species were on the edge of extinction throughout its range and if Vancouver Island were the only place it could be preserved, but this is clearly not the case.

In any case, ecological research is only just beginning to reveal the importance of variation among different populations within the same species, which results from evolution in and local adaptation to slightly different environments. For this reason, reintroduction and/or transplants of species into the wild can be considered valid conservation measures only if careful attention is paid to the genetric origin of the species involved. The proposal to introduce mountain goats hardly fits that description. The fact that this introduction might be innocuous in terms of environmental damage is irrelevant. We need positive reasons for the introduction.

The newspaper article suggests that an important reason for bringing mountain goats to Vancouver Island would be to allow the public to see these animals in the wild. The logical, if ridiculous, extension to this sort of reasoning is that we should try to introduce all species of large and magnificent animals to Vancouver Island — a perfect cageless zoo. While we cannot deny that seeing a wild mountan goat is a thrilling experience, we feel that the present fauna of the island are magnificent enough in their natural state.

Mr. Lang suggests that the presence of mountain goats on the Island will be a boon to research on these animals, presumably so that the information gathered can be applied to the management of goat populations elsewhere. However, there are obviously limits to how far one can extrapolate information from populations in one region to populations in another, especially when the study population is artificial.

We suspect the real motive behind this proposal is to provide one more potentially huntable species of big game animal for this area. While we are not taking issue with hunting per se, this seems remarkably inadequate justification for such a plan, especially considering the general abundance of big game species in this province.

Our main objection is that it is a simple waste of money, even if done as cheaply as possible. Most species of animals and plants in this province have never been studied in their natural habitats. Most of these are not of direct economic significance (e.g. reptiles, amphibians, small mammals, non-pest insects), but their preservation in natural situations is important. Basic research on non-game species needs to be done, and in many cases it can be done inexpensively. The benefits of investing money in such endeavors will have widespread and lasting value, especially when compared to the benefits of introducing mountain goats to Vancouver Island.

The views expressed here are our personal opinions as professional ecologists. — P. Gregory and R. Montgomerie, Department of Biology, University of Victoria.

'Campain' 1979

Clouds n Water Gallery One is organizing an exhibition titled Campain/campaign 79. This will be an in-depth installation documenting the 1979 federal election. It will include contributions of material from artists and the general public.

Chuck Stake Enterprizes, the exhibition coordinator, is asking anyone interested to send their images, ideas, posters, buttons, collages, stickybacks, drawings, photos, xeroxes, statements, newspaper clippings, and so on — if nothing else, just your prediction of the results. The gallery wishes to receive any and all material relating to the election; the issues, the personalities, the winners, the losers, the humor and the tragedy. It is hoped the resulting installation will catch the essence, and reflect the atmosphere, of campaign '79.

All material received is to be catalogued and archived as Campain 79, therefore it cannot be returned.

Documentation along with a list of participants will be published and sent to all exhibitors.

Deadline for receiving material is election day.

Please send your election material to: Campain/campaign 79, Gallery One Clouds n Water, 516A 9th Avenue S.W., Calgary, Alberta.

Fines not fair

I wish to respond to Mr. Simon Boesgaard's letter of March 23. Although Mr. Boesgaard seems to feel that he must comment on all aspects of our justice system at one time, I wish to refute one portion of the letter only.

Mr. Boesgaard makes the statement that the demerit point system for driving offences should be replaced by "immediate, stiff fines." The tone of his letter implies that fines would be a fairer system. Fines for such offences as dangerous driving merely allow the rich to continue driving carelessly — those who cannot afford to pay the fine go to jail. Mr. Boesgaard may think this is an equitable system — I do not. — Christine E. Reimer, 1951 Woodley Road.

Freedom of information . . . but only if it suits them

One of the more pressing initiatives stalled by the dissolution of Parliament was a bill guaranteeing citizens access to federal government documents — a bill the Trudeau government has, in its various incarnations, been mulling over the past 10 years.

Justice Minister John Turner called for the introduction of a freedom of information act in 1969, an act which would give the public the right to obtain copies of government documents in all but "a very narrow list" of cases, and assure citizens of a judicial review if cabinet ministers refused to turn over the requested information. The standing Commons-Senate Committee on Regulations and Other Statutory Instruments recommended last summer that an information commissioner be appointed to examine any documents in dispute, and that people upset with his decision be allowed to appeal to the Federal Court of Canada.

But the government, ever ready to leap to its feet with a loud "yes, but . . .", could not force itself to break the bonds of secrecy which it has so painstakingly forged. No sooner had State Secretary John Roberts told a Victoria conference on freedom of information that his proposed bill represented a "milestone step in the evolution of rights and freedoms," than he proceeded to list nine categories of exceptions which ensured that it would be nothing of the sort.

The government would not release any documents, he said, if they would harm international relations, national defence or security, or federal-provincial relations; if they would reveal information obtained by a government investigative body, or details on detection of offences; if they would reveal legal opinions prepared for the government; or if they would reveal information voluntarily supplied to government institutions before the new information law took effect. This is just a partial list; as Toronto lawyer Peter Grant commented, "the exemptions are still so broad you could drive a truck through them."

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

Broad, fuzzy and compromised. An information commissioner would be appointed to review the documents, Mr. Roberts said, but he would serve a seven-year term as an officer of Parliament, tied by strings from which the Auditor-General and the Official Languages Commissioner are mercifully free. His decisions could be appealed to the Federal court, but only if it could be argued that he had acted frivolously or failed to fulfil his duties. Since the bill's exemptions are hazy enough to hide any possible frivolity or dereliction of duty, a citizen's chance of appeal, let alone successful appeal, would be doomed from the start.

Astonishingly, Mr. Roberts believes few Canadians would call on the information commissioner, since the government would release most of the requested files without a whimper. Is he talking about the same government which has dealt with Quebec's Keable Commission and with the McDonald Royal Commission into RCMP activities? The government which has stamped "top secret" on any file with a remotely controversial air and fought the release of the most innocuous of documents with a protest that it will breach "national security" or interfere with "ministerial responsibility"?

The Association for the Right to Information had a better idea last year when it wrote that the bill should "give anyone the right to obtain any information held by government, unless it is specifically exempted" — and we would underline the word "specifically". The Canadian Bar Association recently urged that the bill permit only six exemptions: cabinet records; internal policy advice; national defence and international relations; law enforcement and legal proceedings (not including documents revealing illegal police activity); privacy of individuals; and certain types of financial information. No "national security" clause. No protection for information surrendered before the proclamation of the act. And most important, an unfettered right to appeal an information commissioner's recommendation to the Federal court.

One purpose of a freedom of information act is to let citizens know whether, how often and in what context their names are mentioned in files compiled and held by the government. It is not designed to bury civil liberties beneath a mountain of ill-defined exceptions which serve only to still the government's fears that uncontrolled disclosure might reveal blunders the government would prefer to keep secret.

Whoever forms the next government should keep the distinction in mind.

'Nebular theory' backed by discoveries

By WALTER SULLIVAN
New York Times

When, in the early 17th century, Galileo found four moons orbiting Jupiter, he realized that his discovery confirmed the Copernican proposition that the earth and other planets are in orbit around the sun.

Now Voyager 1 has flown through Jupiter's "Galilean" moons, returning pictures that reveal each to have its own distinctive features. That their densities decrease outward from Jupiter while the spacing of their orbits increases is an even more dramatic analogue of the solar system.

The fly-by also revealed a ring of material orbiting Jupiter inside its innermost moon, reinforcing the view that such rings were a typical byproduct of planetary formation beyond the orbit of Mars. Until recently only Saturn was known to have rings, but they have now been discovered around Uranus and Jupiter. This has led to a proposal that a huge ring may encircle the sun inside the orbit of Mercury.

Do all these discoveries mean a comprehensive and universally accepted theory for formation of the solar system is near? Every hypothesis to date has been challenged on one ground or another; nevertheless, some features of such a theory now seem established, notably the birth of the system from a rotating nebula of dust and gas. It is also widely believed that shock waves from a gigantic star explosion, or supernova, provided the push needed to start condensation of the cloud into planets, moons and a central star.

The original nebular theory, adumbrated by the Greeks and spelled out by Laplace in the 18th century, was beautifully straightforward. All the bodies in the solar system appeared to rotate in the same direction. It was therefore assumed that this rotation, plus the revolution of each body on its axis, preserved the angular momentum of the great cloud from which all the bodies formed.

As this speed-up occurred, it was assumed, the rotating cloud flattened into a disk. All the planets and other bodies born from the cloud orbit the sun within a disk-like region.

Other regularities were observed. The spacing between planetary orbits tends to double as one moves outward from the sun — a "law" primarily applicable to the inner planets and, in part, to the inner moons of Jupiter and Saturn.

In 1849 the French astronomer-mathematician Edouard Roche explained why Saturn has rings — a rule now applicable to the rings of Uranus and Jupiter. He calculated that within a distance from a planet's centre equal to 2.45 times its radius the tidal effect of the planet's gravity would prevent any moon from forming. The rings of Saturn all lie inside about 2.30 radii. Its innermost moon is just outside the "Roche limit" of 2.45 radii.

The beautifully ordered picture of the solar system encountered trouble late in the 19th century. In 1898, for example, the "wrong-way" moon Phoebe was found in orbit around Saturn. All five of the outermost moons now known to be orbiting Jupiter are similarly "retrograde."

Unlike the four large Galilean moons that are in nearly circular orbits above the Jovian equator, the outer moons are in egg-shaped, tilted orbits, which may mean they are asteroids captured by Jovian gravity.

Most asteroids circle the sun between the orbits of Jupiter and Mars in a broad zone that, according to the systematic spacing of planets, should be occupied by a planet. Perhaps the solar nebula was too thin in that zone to congeal.

Another problem was pointed out by James Clerk Maxwell who, late in the last century, founded the modern theory of light and electromagnetism. If the nebula began as a cloud of roughly uniform density it appeared that the mutual gravitational attraction of all those little particles was far too weak to pull them together in the face of other effects, such as solar gravity and their own motions.

Such challenges to the nebular theory led to a succession of proposals involving various catastrophes, such as the approach of another star whose gravity tore material from the sun to form the inner, rocky planets. The intruder's own material, pulled out by solar gravity, would have formed the great, low-density outer planets (Jupiter and beyond).

Another suggestion was that this was originally a two-star system and that one star blew up in a supernova, leaving the debris that formed into planets and moons.

Now the nebular idea is again out front. There is evidence, for example, from the forms of oxygen found in some meteorites, that a supernova injected newly created, radioactive elements into the cloud and produced the shock waves needed to begin forming the sun and planets.

One of the most stubborn difficulties concerns the origin of the moon. All other moons are tiny compared to their "parent" planet, while the earth's moon is so large that it is more like a planetary companion of the earth.

One of those who has speculated extensively on this problem and the origin of the solar system as a whole is Dr. Alastair G. W. Cameron of the Harvard-Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory in Cambridge, Mass. He believes the earth and moon were born of a catastrophic collision between two planets that formed in or near the earth's present orbit. In his hypothesis, part of the resulting debris coalesced to form the moon. The rest was blown off into space. It was this event, he believes, that depleted the earth of such light-weight constituents as argon 36. It was not, he believes, the effect of a very hot phase in the evolution of the sun, as previously assumed.

The recent discovery that Venus is relatively rich in argon 36 is therefore no surprise to Dr. Cameron. He concedes that his concept is controversial. But direct exploration of the solar system is at an early stage and the evidence is still too meager to hope for final answers.

The fast-food forms of love

By HERBERT GOLD
(From a column in the Atlantic Monthly)

We have all been taught love as the means to fulfil ourselves. Have we overlearned the lesson? Without violating the pieties of the time, perhaps we need to study next how to regulate the predatory and programmatic forms of love which have become popular consumer products, like baroque music and mouth fresheners. Who can oppose Vivaldi, sweet exhalation and tender concern?

Yet there remains the problem of how we mean them and use them. I'm not ready to testify against love as devotion to someone or something, love as caring for others, love as compassion, love as desire. These old-fashioned occasions for tenderness and sacrifice of self are being endangered not only by neglect and failure — the familiar troubles — but also by artificial, formularized, prepackaged attention. The fast-food forms of love which really serve to look back only upon the lover himself or herself with adoration. The lovee is a convenience, an occasion for private bliss, like a tummy TV. Something icky has become a style of the age: a fully expressed, deeply explored, zoom-lens, saturation-bombing love. People-Person love. Predatory and programmatic love provides a technical boost to the pooped soul. HAVE YOU HUGGED YOUR BUMPER STICKER TODAY?

The power of cold

russell baker

NEW YORK — I recently worked in a group that was sharing a cold. One of the first people to take his turn at it went to a doctor who charged him $90 for the visit and called it tonsilitis.

The rest of us decided to settle for something cheaper and called it a cold, although there was nothing cold about it. There never is about a cold. Colds are almost always warm. A good one makes you feel downright hot, but for reasons known best to medical science the ailment — at least in its cut-rate form — is never called a hot, but always a cold.

Sometimes it is called the common cold, which is also a misnomer. There is never anything common about the colds I experience, and I resent having them described in such humdrum terms. I am proud of my colds. When I entertain one, my hospitality is bountiful. The cold enjoys full run of the body, from head to toe.

Perhaps because colds rarely encounter such a gracious reception, they usually stay on with me long after their welcome has worn thin. I sometimes suspect that I am well known among colds as a good place for a two-week vacation.

In any case, when this particular cold appeared in our group people who could not afford tonsilitis decided that it was "a virus," or "the flu," or "this thing that's going around."

As a veteran host to a rich variety of colds, I avoid such terminology. Colds are very stupid. If you refer to one as "this thing that's going around," it is apt to confuse itself with a marijuana cigarette, conclude that it is making everybody happy and stay around forever.

When the group cold finally arrived at my corporeal place of residence, it was immediately obvious that it was neither the flu nor a virus. The flu raises your temperature to 106 degrees and a virus makes you ache in the calf muscles.

It was clear from the first onset that this particular germ had no such power. The raw, inflamed throat tissue with which it announced itself in residence was a trifling nuisance compared to the great sore throats of colds past, and at no time did my temperature ever rise above 101 degrees.

This did not diminish my resolve to enjoy the cold. Most people adopt the heroic stance when cold-ridden, insist upon carrying bravely on and tell you it's really nothing. This is foolish. A cold is not London during the blitz, but a misery to be wallowed in with complete self-indulgence.

In its first stages, the entire head feels overstuffed with warm cotton. The cheeks burn. The eyes feel glassy. The face becomes puffy and assumes lines of surliness. Strange heat radiates down the neck into the shoulders, which feel secondhand.

The sensation of turning into somebody else, and somebody quite unpleasant, can best be tolerated if, in fact, you go ahead and let yourself turn into somebody else quite unpleasant. Here is a day for kicking the dog, whipping the children and telling colleagues they have granite where brains should be.

The day of the sore throat, which follows, will win back the sympathy lost on opening day if you walk about grasping at your windpipe, muttering that you are in agony and announcing that you fear the end is near.

The third day is the time to win the affection and respect of all humanity by ostentatiously cautioning men, women and tykes not to approach too near, lest you infect them with the water plague. On this day the face swells under the pressure of rising waters which gush forth in mysterious abundance. By the fourth day the torrent is so mighty that it backs up in soggy grey pools just under the eyes and oozes out of the eyeballs in a continuing trickle.

This is a good day to spend in bed staring at television through a watery film, since you are scarecly fit to be seen by human eyes and will also probably have a fever that leaves the brain just sufficiently disordered to relish eight straight hours of the tube.

On the fifth day, miraculously dry in the skull, I like to savor the sensation Lazarus must have felt, and so I rise from the bed and go into the streets creaking, wheezing and looking freshly escaped from the intensive-care unit, to announce joyously that I am returned from the dead, am once again "up and about" and feeling just fine.

If anyone threatens to believe me, I produce a handkerchief and bring them to their senses by displaying my death-rattle cough. Performed in front of a benign employer, I am told, this may result in an unanticipated week's vacation in the islands, although I have yet to enjoy a cold so powerful as that.

Sewer Change Saves Gorge Firs

Mature fir trees along the Gorge will be left intact and private property left undisturbed under a revised sewer expansion project recommended to Saanich council Tuesday night by its public works committee.

The earlier threat of environmental disruption was involved in an engineering proposal to upgrade sewer capacity in the Gorge area.

The proposal envisaged running the sewer line through several properties near the Gorge Road Hospital.

But the more expensive compromise — involving another $85,000 — reached after nearly a year of discussions between Saanich and Victoria officials is to install a siphon on the seabed from Harriet Road to downstream of the hospital, where it would link up with the existing trunk sewer.

Saanich aldermen agreed Tuesday with municipal engineer Clifford Warren that the city should be asked to share in the estimated $560,000 cost of the project.

Warren said the city has an obligation to do so because it is already overusing the present Gorge syphon upstream.

But committee chairman Ald. Fred Severson had another reason for asking Victoria to contribute: "We are doing the city a favor by not bothering city residents in going through their yards. We decided to be good neighbors and go another, more expensive route."

The earlier alignment routed through private property was first estimated to cost $375,000, but another $100,000 was added to the bill for extra care and attention in the backyards of properties, Warren recalled.

Although several easements were acquired for that original routing, a few residents had stubbornly held out and officials said at one point the only alternative would be expropriation.

Angry property owners claimed at least 50 mature fir trees would have to come down and their property values would be depreciated, apart from the months of inconvenience caused by blasting and construction.

Access Proposal Rejected

Saanich council's public works committee threw out Tuesday night a controversial recommendation from the municipal engineer that access be provided from Cedar Hill Road to serve an extension to the University Heights shopping centre at Shelbourne and McKenzie.

The proposal had been opposed by predominantly elderly residents of apartment buildings in the area, who claimed the new access would pose a hazard for pedestrians using the shopping centre.

Closing the access will mean eastbound traffic on McKenzie having to turn left at the Shelbourne intersection — Saanich's second worst accident spot in 1978 — and making a circuitous approach to the shopping centre.

Warren said, however, that extra pressure on the intersection will be alleviated by the installation of a left-turn arrow on the traffic lights later this year.

Challenge By Builders

A spokesman for the Construction Association of Victoria Tuesday night challenged Saanich municipality to provide all the facts and figures for a realistic cost comparison of the work done by private contractors and the municipal public works department.

"We're not saying we can do it better," said association president David Weller. "What we are saying is sit down with us, put all your facts on the table and let's compare them with ours."

Weller invited the public works committee to appoint a special sub-committee, including senior municipal officials, to meet with association representatives for a series of discussions on the best means of meeting the municipality's public works construction requirements.

The move followed an earlier, similar approach from the Island Equipment Owners Association, urging Saanich to put most of its work out to tender.

Weller said present comparisons cannot be made on an apples-to-apples basis because the municipal public works department tends to cloud its cost-accounting picture by burying some key factors in other areas of the over-all municipal budget.

Maureen Nuttall, president of Local 374 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said the union is solidly opposed to contracting out, both because it wants to protect members' jobs and because it believes taxpayers get better value from a municipal work force than from the private sector.

"What the Construction Association fails to mention is that it operates on a profit motive, while municipal employees do not," she added.

Mayor Mel Couvelier commented that as Saanich is only adopting the so-called performance budgeting technique for the first time this year, the full detailed information required for a cost comparison may not be available for about 18 months.

But he said he would like to see Saanich begin talks with the industry much earlier. The committee finally tabled the item until its next meeting.

Baptists' Rezoning Proposal Refused

Saanich council has refused to rezone property at 1584 Wilkinson Road for a new church building planned by the Saanich Baptist Church.

When the application was considered at a public hearing in April, 1978, several residents of the area expressed concern about traffic and drainage problems.

The matter was tabled for a staff report on servicing costs and then stalled, council was told this week, due to an apparent lack of interest by the applicant.

The church's renewed application came to council with an updated report from municipal engineer Clifford Warren indicating the developer's costs for improving storm drainage would now be $33,000, more than double the original estimate.

Aldermen said the application should be rejected in recognition of neighborhood concerns and because the excessive servicing costs underline the unsuitability of the site.

Fairer, Faster System To Settle Claims

Saanich will introduce a fairer, quicker system for settling damage claims against the municipality if council endorses a recommendation from its public works committee.

Ignoring advice from officials not to tamper with the present procedures, the committee recommended Tuesday that Saanich take over the adjusting function and settle promptly small damage claims and plumbing bills — if staff are satisfied they resulted from sewer or drain blockages on municipal property.

Municipal solicitor Chris Nation advised aldermen in a report to continue using the ICBC adjusters, who make their decisions according to the strict rules of municipal liability.

Nation conceded that in some cases their decisions may seem unfair because a municipality enjoys a degree of protection from liability not afforded to citizens.

But if Saanich were to take over the adjusting function and pay certain claims where they were not really payable it would invite trouble, he warned.

"Firstly, Saanich could be accused of spending money unlawfully and secondly, Saanich could be accused of discrimination for paying some claims but not others."

Ald. Howard Sturrock argued, however, that it is precisely because a municipality enjoys greater protection from liability than the ordinary citizen that so many inequities and injustices arise.

"Municipal liability is so distorted by law that even if a citizen feels he has a solid case the municipality may not be found liable," he said.

Sturrock's motion for the change in claim-handling procedures was passed by a 5-3 vote, with Aldermen David Paterson, Irene Block and Geoff Vantreight opposed.

Wolfe Goofs On Farm Tax Break

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe made a budget error that won't sit well with farm property owners who thought they were getting a big tax break.

Wolfe rose in the house Tuesday to correct the section which says assessments on farm land for municipal and school tax purposes will be cut in half next year.

That 50 per cent reduction applies only to assessments for school purposes, not municipal purposes, he told the house.

Bus Cutbacks Worry Chamber

The Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce is concerned that cancellation of two buses daily between Victoria and Vancouver could cause inconvenience to travellers, chamber president Mel Cooper said Monday.

The services cancelled March 22 with the introduction of the B.C. Ferries spring schedule were the 7 a.m. departure from Victoria and the 9 a.m. departure from downtown Vancouver, which connected with the 8 a.m. sailing from Swartz Bay and the 10 a.m. sailing from Tsawwassen.

Cooper said the chamber is trying to have them reinstated because it believes as a general principle that with each ferry sailing there should be a connecting bus service to the downtown destination.

"We're concerned about the people who will be inconvenienced," Cooper said, noting that many travellers arrange private transportation to the ferry terminal and then purchase their bus tickets aboard the vessel.

Pacific Coach Lines general manager Jack Thomas said the buses were cancelled for economic and operational efficiency reasons.

He said although passengers have grown accustomed to expect a bus accompanying every sailing, it is their responsibility to ascertain in advance whether a bus will be aboard.

In the case of those travellers who turn up at the downtown bus terminals for one of the cancelled services, he said, the inconvenience will be minimal involving only a one-hour wait for the next scheduled bus.

Wride Rites Held

A private funeral service was held Friday at Christ Church Cathedral for Dr. Reg Wride, 79, retired chief of surgery at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

The former Canadian army surgeon came to Victoria in 1940, entered practice here in 1945. He was president of North Pacific Surgical Association, team doctor for the old WCHL Victoria Maple Leafs, a president of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club and Union Club, besides being active in Shrine and other Masonic orders.

Survivors include his wife Ted, daughter Marjorie (Mrs. Alex Stewart, of Victoria), a brother Gordon in Ontario, two grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Cartoonist Deplores Censorship

TORONTO (CP) — Barriers to freedom of expression in newspapers, magazines and the government were attacked by panelists at the National Book Festival who have been personally affected by censorship.

Cartoonist Bob Bierman of the Victoria Times said during a panel discussion sponsored by the Periodical Writers Association of Canada that "a political cartoonist, like a satirist, has to be offensive to make a point."

The B.C. Supreme Court has ruled that a caricature Bierman drew of a provincial cabinet minister pulling wings off flies in June, 1978, was libelous.

"Since the judgment, I've had to soften my approach in order to sell my product and make a living," he said.

"My editor is checking my stuff; if she isn't sure, she takes it to the publisher, who then takes it to his lawyer."

A second panelist to feel the weight of censorship was Peter Treu, the Montreal electronics engineer whose conviction on charges of unauthorized possession and inadequate care of secret documents has been overturned by the Quebec Court of Appeals.

He was convicted at a secret trial of violating the Official Secrets Act. But Treu said "that act was used as covert censorship, a means to entrapment.

"I'm still prohibited from talking about what happened in the trial and only recently I was told to keep my mouth shut."

Toronto lawyer Clayton Ruby told the audience that concepts of libel or indecent material are so vague that the outcome of a trial depends on their interpretation by the presiding judge. He successfully defended the homosexual newspaper The Body Politic on a charge of sending immoral material through the mails.

The only panelist in favor of censorship was Edmonton journalist Myrna Kostash, who said that, as a feminist, she advocated the suppression of pornographic material.

Mammoth On Loan

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union is lending Britain a mummified 40,000-year-old baby mammoth for exhibit in London in May, the official Soviet newspaper Izvestia reports.

The mammoth, which has been on view at a zoology museum in Leningrad, was discovered preserved in a layer of ice and crushed stone in Siberia, the paper said Saturday.

Fiscal Accounting Urged on Ottawa

known as the Lambert Commission after its chairman, included Robert Depres, former president of the University of Quebec, Ted Hodgetts, a professor of political economy at the University of Toronto and Gerry Stoner, a senior federal public servant.

Lambert said at a news conference that the absence of accountability in the government has been quietly developing since the early 1960s.

"An enormous vacuum has existed for several years during which no one has been paying much attention to the quality of management throughout the ranks of the federal government.

"That this should lead to the development of inefficiency is hardly surprising."

The commission recommends a series of far-reaching changes in the responsiblities of several cabinet posts and a fundamental restructuring of government:

— A new ministry would be established to replace Treasury Board, the department which now has control over the government's purse strings. The new body, the board of management, would have a mandate not only to keep track of spending, but also to maintain a high standard of efficiency and ensure that all department managers account adequately for performance and spending.

— Two existing departments, supply and services and public works, would operate on a new basis. They would provide services to other government departments on a cost-recovery basis. They would charge each department for services rendered, but other departments would have the option of challenging the fees charged.

— Each department would be required to set up a chief administrative officer, a second-in-command to the minister with legal and practical responsibility to sign the department's accounts and defend them before Parliament.

— All government departments would be asked to develop internal auditing programs to allow their managers to assess whether they are providing taxpayers with their money's worth.

— Each department's performance would be evaluated two or three times a year by a four-member audit committee. Two members of the committee would come from outside the public service, the other two would be appointed by the minister in charge of the new board of management.

—A comprehensive list of the "bewildering array" of approximately 400 Crown corporations would be made. The agencies would be grouped into categories setting out their degree of dependence on the government, ranging from those under direct ministerial control to those such as Air Canada which operate on a commercial basis. Once the list was complete, each could be subject to the kind of controls imposed on government departments as far as was compatible with their objectives.

8-12 Million Die In Missile Attack?

WASHINGTON (AP) — A civil defence study released Tuesday concludes that eight to 12 million people could be killed in a Soviet missile attack on U.S. strategic missile, submarine and bomber bases.

The estimate by the U.S. Defence Civil Preparedness Agency was based on a 15-minute-to-30-minute warning of an attack on 37 Strategic Air Command bases, nine intercontinental ballistic missile fields, and the two ports for nuclear missile submarines.

In addition, the agency estimated that if the country's nuclear research facilities were included in the attack, some 14 million to 18 million people would die.

The agency estimates took into account current federal civil defence planning, concluding that it is "relatively ineffective under any type of nuclear war, and for any amount of warning."

BIG AID TO BLIND PROGRAMMER

A Typewriter That Talks In French-Oriental Accent

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Errol Hembroff has a talking typewriter that speaks with a French-oriental accent.

He finds it an invaluable aid to his work at the B.C. Systems Corp. where he is a computer programmer.

And the peculiar intonation doesn't bother him a bit as the machine he helped design spells words out audibly using synthesized speech.

For Hembroff, who is blind, has the first Spellex III attachment, an instrument assembled to his specifications at the University of B.C. electrical engineering department.

What it does is vocalize words and numerals from the paper readout on his electronic typewriter, giving him instant replay without having to take his hands off the keys.

The work was undertaken by Dr. Michael Beddoes — assisted by technician Mark Bunte — who has pioneered synthesized speech in B.C. and is now working on the development of a talking Opticon machine for the blind or persons with reading or vision deficiencies.

"The beauty of this machine for a blind person," Hembroff explained to a group of sightless visitors to Canadian National Institute for the Blind, "... you have no ambiguity because the translation can't jump a line. It's more efficient than an Opticon.

"I can't sing the praises of this too highly for anyone involved in the computer interface if he's visually handicapped."

The machine gives "instant visibility of what you have just typed," Hembroff said.

Each letter, symbol or numeral in synthesized speech is supposed to be a distinct sound, although there are some that are inevitably confused, like "m" and "n", "b" and "v", or "seven" and "semi" (for semi-colon).

Hembroff's acute hearing has no trouble distinguishing the individual sounds, spoken in a clipped, flat, robot-like voice.

Hembroff said the reason for the odd accent is that the graduate student helping Beddoes was of Chinese descent and passed his pronunciation along when storing the language in the computer.

Hembroff uses the Texas Instruments Silent 700 typewriter (about $2,500) to talk to the computer, and the computer answers, giving information about the programs in its memory bank.

Spellex ($1,000) acts as go-between, with electronic circuitry, backup and speedup switches, a 240-character memory and a small loudspeaker or headphones for the operator.

Hembroff said he was describing his machine this week to a meeting of blind data processors at a Seattle seminar where he was also giving a paper on compiling manuals for blind operators.

He said the Opticon reader, using a lens and photoelectric cell to convert letters to impulses, has difficulty following some conventional page layouts.

Love is love in any language. So too is warmth and hospitality, but what about understanding?

That was the underlying theme — international understanding in this Year of the Child — in a beautiful concert I attended Saturday night at Pearson College of the Pacific.

Oh sure. Monday was the royal night when anyone who is anyone packed in with Prince Charles to watch the show. Saturday was for the peasants and what was shared that night was a wonderfully warm experience.

Tremendous talent burst forth from these children of the world. Music ranging from jazz to classical piano, folk dances from every different culture and each one introduced by words of wisdom from men like Tolstoy, Lester Pearson, Einstein and Kahlil Gibran.

"Why is man so callous?" asked one of the readers. "There is not enough love in our hearts," answered the other. "So many of us are afraid — we are afraid of our parents, we are afraid of our teachers and we are afraid of our boss. So life is lived in fear and darkness. That is why man is callous."

Love bloomed at Pearson College on Saturday night, though, with a marvellous feeling of oneness with the world running through it all. And when the show was over the students poured from the stage into the audience with a daffodil for each of us and an invitation to stay for coffee and friendship.

Meet Pearson College, the evening was called, and among those taking the students up on their offer were Rev. Ron Johnstone and some of his Garden City United Church parishioners.

A few months ago, I wrote of Rev. Ron's international experiment of having Pearson College students of two different nationalities speak at the church service one Sunday a month for six months. Well, that experiment ends next Sunday when Jacqueline Leong of Singapore and Caroline Jaruga of Papua-New Guinea will be the guests. But it won't end there, if the minister has his way. He's so delighted with the response from the church-goers and the feelings that have grown between them and the students, he wants to see it become an annual affair.

On each of the International Sundays, families who go to the United Church have acted as hosts to the students. But what began with a meal grew into something much more. Many have moments they'll long cherish.

Like Jenny Malmsten, one of several who adopted students for three weeks over Christmas, who had South American students at her home during the holidays and, because they were from three different time zones, ended up celebrating three New Year's Eves!

Like Pat O'Keefe and his wife Rae who, though they have three children of their own and a foster child, had Jorge Del Rio of Colombia with them for three weeks at Christmas.

"I think we've adopted another son," said Rae.

"We also heard of a boy from Africa who was going to be spending Christmas alone so we invited him for the day and ended up with a truly international table," she added.

Then there was Phyllis Morley whose Palestinian refugees became "refugees in Canada" and sought the asylum of friendship with her.

When Pearson College broke for a week's work experience, the job offer for Baher Al-Ashab fell through and he had nowhere to go.

"I invited him to stay with me for the week," said Phyllis. "But I ended up with three students!"

Anis Kanaan, another Palestinian refugee, had gone to the U.S. to see his brother that week but the immigration officials wouldn't let him stay.

"He landed back at the bus depot where he was going to spend the night but I told him to come to my home, too," Phyllis said. "Then Evelyne De Ryck of Belgium, who had been staying in a youth hostel, ran out of money and phoned Baher. So I told her to come along, as well. They brought their sleeping bags and it was a happy time for all of us."

Actually, Baher was hosted by Ed and Daisy Dack after his church speech and he gave them introductions to his sister and brother-in-law who live in Jerusalem. When the Dacks made a recent trip to the Holy Land they were feted and showered with beautiful gifts by the grateful student's relatives.

"It has been a joy and a privilege to have got to know these young people from Pearson College," said Rev. Ron who has found the inspiration for more than one sermon from their ability to understand and to share, no matter what their religion.

"We have done very little for the young people but they have done much for us," he said. "They have challenged us to open our minds to understanding, our homes to hospitality and our hearts to love."

Mitchell Nomination Upheld 17-0

The Big Scramble Starts to Complete Island Slates

The executive of the provincial NDP constituency of Esquimalt-Port Renfrew Tuesday night voted 17-0 to uphold the controversial one-vote nomination victory of Frank Mitchell over John Brewin.

A spokesman for Brewin said today a decision will be made Thursday about whether an appeal will be lodged with the provincial executive of the party.

Mitchell won the nomination March 25 when meeting chairman Bill Doneley voted twice, once as a delegate and later to break a 225-225 tie.

Doneley argued he was entitled to vote twice under Robert's Rules of Order.

At a stormy meeting Tuesday night at Dominion Hall, the constituency executive heard debate from supporters of Mitchell and Brewin and were particularly interested in reports from experts on Robert's Rules of Order.

Contituency president Marlene Eddy said today it was demonstrated that a chairman can vote twice under certain circumstances.

The first vote was as a delegate and in the form of a ballot. The chairman cannot cast a second ballot but he may verbally declare a winner in the event of a tie.

"This is the procudure followed by many unions and we had a number of people who told us this was also in accordance with Robert's Rules of Order."

In addition, she said, a letter from Nanaimo MLA Dave Stupich was read to the meeting. In the letter, Stupich upheld the nomination of Mitchell as being within the rules as outlined prior to the start of the nominating meeting.

Stupich was at the nominating meeting.

Mrs. Eddy said the matter is closed as far as the constituency executive is concerned following the unanimous vote, although supporters of Brewin could still, if they wish, lodge an appeal to the provincial executive.

She said she was "surprised, shocked" by the unanimous vote of the executive because debate had taken more than four hours and became heated on several occasions.

Already nominated for the Esquimalt-Port Renfrew riding are sitting Socred MLA Lyle Kahl and Conservative Bill Langlois.

Nominations already completed for other Vancouver Island ridings:

VICTORIA (two seats): No nominations, although Socred Sam Bawlf is likely to be nominated and both Mayor Mike Young and former mayor Peter Pollen have been mentioned as possible running mates. The Socred nominating meeting will be held April 16 at 8 p.m. at the McPherson Playhouse. The NDP likely will nominate MLA Charles Barber while John Shields of the Labor Council and school trustee Mark Fisher are seeking the second spot.

SAANICH AND THE ISLANDS: Conservatives have nominated John Green, executive assistant of party leader Stephens. Socreds are likely to nominate the sitting member Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis. Saanich Ald. John Mika is seeking the NDP nomination.

NANAIMO: Socred Tom Humble will challenge NDP MLA Dave Stupich.

COMOX: NDP MLA Karen Sanford will be opposed by Socred Delbert Doll and Tory Rick Kello.

Nurserymen 'Undermined' By the Feds

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

A charge that the federal Agricultural Research Centre in Central Saanich is undermining nurserymen by selling potted chrysanthemum on the open market was denied today by director Dr. Joseph M. Molnar.

The centre's price was $1.50 per potted plant, he said. The commercial wholesale price of a six-inch potted chrysanthemum is $3.

"The research centre should not complete with people earning a living from flowers," MacIntosh said.

"We are not opposed to the centre selling, providing the sale is advertised and the plants sold by auction," he said.

But Molnar said only 200 potted plants are involved and 125 have been sold.

"They are only three inches high, not six inches," he said. "We also didn't decorate the pots like the growers do. So the plants were not a give-away — not under-priced."

He said the plants were grown for a nutrition study and were not destroyed at the end of the research program because of a government policy against wasting taxpayers' dollars.

"So we sell them and return the money to the Treasury," he said.

He said the centre is also undertaking a sales research study, and this is why the plants were not sold by auction.

"It wouldn't be worth making the study if we sold them by auction because of trouble and time involved in finding and making arrangements with the purchaser," he said.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. My wife and I are going to England this summer and are in the process of getting passports. As a matter of interest, could you tell us how passports first began and how? F.A.

A. The earliest legislation in passports appears to be an act by Henry V which mentions safe conducts in 1414. The earliest passport still extant was one issued on June 18, 1641, and signed by Charles I. The last personally-signed passport by a monarch — George III — was issued in March, 1794, to a Robert Liston. Before 1858 British passports were issued in French. Photographs were introduced in 1914.

Relief Proposed In 'Blockbusting'

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier wants to see homeowners along a seven-block strip of Shelbourne reap some cash compensation for a planning decision years ago which sent their properties, financially and esthetically, on a steady downhill slide.

Couvelier suggested Tuesday night Saanich should atone for its treatment of the residents by prezoning their properties to apartment use so that they, rather than developers or speculators, can benefit from the enhanced land values.

"We have been guilty by virtue of a former planning decision (to make Shelbourne a major traffic artery) of blockbusting," he told the public works committee.

"The effect has been to continue to reduce property values on Shelbourne to the point where developers will acquire them, knock them down and then come to council with redevelopment proposals."

The mayor said the process has already started and he cannot see any way of halting it.

"But I am concerned that the existing residents, the ones who have taken it on the chin all these years, should benefit in some way as some small recompense for a decision by previous councils."

The committee accepted his suggestion that the matter be discussed in detail by council's planning committee.

Couvelier said today he is not an advocate of pre-zoning the entire municipality, but in the case of the Shelbourne strip between North Dairy and Pear he believes council should zone the land two lots deep, on both sides of the road, for its eventual, logical use as apartments.

He said he has been inside a number of older homes in the area and they show obvious signs of physical deterioration from traffic vibration, including cracked foundations and loosened windows.

In addition, property values have declined substantially and many older residents have moved out, to be replaced by transient occupants who have allowed the properties to become unkempt.

Couvelier said no one can deny the present situation is directly the fault of former Saanich planning policies.

"We let Shelbourne happen," he added. "With some foresight we could have done a number of things to avert this problem, including making Shelbourne and Cedar Hill one-way roads, or upgrading Richmond to relieve traffic pressure on Shelbourne."

Cougars Defence Only Bright Note

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Victoria Cougars, in good position to close in on a berth in the Western Hockey League's Western Divison final, didn't, and coach Jack Shupe had mixed reactions to his team's 3-1 loss to Portland Winter Hawks Tuesday night.

It has been a while, but Shupe was pleased with his defence. He wasn't quite as enthused about about the performance of his forwards.

The attackers, who were instrumental in helping fashion a pair of earlier playoff victories, struggled for two periods and the slow start proved costly Tuesday night at Memorial Arena.

Missing Barry Pedeerson and using captain Geordie Robertson sparingly, the shortage at centre had an obvious affect on the team's offense.

For most of two periods, Victoria's attack sputtered. The passing was atrocious, forechecking and body-checking neglected and the sum total on attack included only centre Gary Lupul's power-play goal.

There was great improvement in the third period, but by then it was too late.

"Our main problem was a lack of confidence," suggested Shupe. "Some (forwards) were thinking that we were minus four players and that was their excuse not to skate. As a result, they wound up putting more pressure on themselves."

Shupe, however, had praise for the work of defencemen Mark Robinson, Tony Feltrin and Scott Lang, along with netminder Steve Amiss.

"There was nothing wrong with our defence," Shupe said, "but our forwards let us down. The wingers weren't picking up passes coming around the boards, they waved their sticks instead of body-checking, and their shooting was poor."

The Cougars, it may be added, also had to reckon with Bart Hunter. The Portland netminder came up with a solid performance to backstop Portland's victory before 3,452 fans.

David Babych, Perry Turnbull and Mike Toal scored the goals that all but clinched a playoff berth for the Winter Hawks in an entertaining game.

Now with eight points from four victories in five starts, the Hawks need only one more victory to be assured of an advance to the Western Division final.

The Cougars, with a 2-3 record in the double round-robin semi-final series, have suddenly fallen from comfort. They play the Bruins in New Westminster tonight and the mainland rivals now loom as the big threat to Victoria.

Cougars will complete the semi-final series with a game Friday in Portland and another against the Bruins here on Saturday. In all probability, the Saturday meeting may tell all unless the Cougars can pull off a victory tonight.

Turnbull, Portland's leading scorer who has had difficutly getting untracked in the playoffs, missed a glorious chance to add to the Hawks total when Amiss stopped the 75-goal scorer on a penalty shot in the final period. Frustrated on two earlier breakaways, Turnbull was awarded the penalty shot when referee Joe Wensink ruled that Amiss threw his stick while making a save.

The Cougars weren't without their scoring chances. Feltrin, Lupul, Geordie Robertson and Torrie Robertson all missed glorious chances for Victoria.

The game ended on a testy note. Geordie Robertson and Hawks' Brad Yachimec squared off in a fight at game's end. That brought all the players from both teams on the ice.

Mariners, Angels Eye Better Year

SEATTLE (AP) — Seattle Mariners and California Angels are ready to attempt the previously impossible when they open the 1979 American League baseball season tonight in the Kingdome.

California owner Gene Autry hopes the addition of baseball's best hitter, Rod Carew, will bring the Angels their first pennant in the 19-year history of the club.

The third-year Mariners have a more modest goal — beating California's opening-night pitcher, Frank Tanana, who is 5-0 lifetime against them.

In the longer run, the Mariners hope to evade the cellar of the AL West, where they finished last year with baseball's worst record, 56-104.

Facing Tanana, 18-12 in 1978, will be right-hander Glenn Abbott, who slumped to a 7-15 record last season.

The debut of a pro sports season would be almost incomplete without a labor dispute, and baseball is no exception this year. Major league umpires have refused to work since the beginning of spring training in a demand for more money.

Barring a last-minute solution, substitute umpires will be called in to start the season. The Northwest Umpires Association was expected to provide arbiters for tonight's game, with a crowd of about 35,000 expected.

Meanwhile, back on the field, the Angels should be one of the better hitting teams in the game this year, after finishing five games behind Kansas City Royals in 1978.

The newest and richest Angel is Carew, the seven-time AL batting champion who was traded to California after 12 seasons with Minnesota Twins.

Backing him up are Don Baylor, Joe Rudi, Bobby Grich, Carney Lansford and Dan Ford. Ford was acquired from Minnesota to replace outfielder Lyman Bostock, who was shot to death in Gary, Ind., last September.

Tanana has four shutouts in two seasons against the Mariners. His nine-hit, 7-0 victory spoiled Seattle's debut in 1977.

For the Mariners, the 6-foot-6 Abbott says improved concentration will be the key to his pitching.

"My concentration is better," said Abbott, who beat Minnesota 3-2 on opening night here last season. "It has to be for me to be able to win."

A year ago, after a 64-98 expansion season, manager Darrell Johnson predicted the Mariners would win at least 75 games in 1978. But several key injuries and batting slumps by the club's four best hitters of the year before ruined all that.

This season he's vowed, "No more predictions."

Instead, Johnson says, "It can't get any worse, can it?"

The Mariners do have some talented players. Julio Cruz, 24, led all major league second basemen in fielding last season and stole 59 bases in 69 attempts. Outfielder Leon Roberts batted .301 with 22 homers and 92 runs-batted-in in 1978.

Shhhh! Canucks Fifth After Nine Long Years

Times News Services

After nine long seasons in the National Hockey League, Vancouver Canucks finally are fifth best at something.

That something, however, isn't in the over-all standings; it's in penalty-killing.

The Canucks used their newly-developed skill to perfection at The Vancouver Coliseum Tuesday night, killing off four minor penalties in skating to a 2-1 decision over Colorado Rockies, who just happen to have the worst record in the NHL.

"It wasn't a classic by any means," said coach Harry Neale of the Canucks. "It's quite a battle to keep up your intensity against a team like Colorado."

Vancouver has a 6-2-2 record in its last 10 games and penalty-killing has helped the Canucks recover from a slump after the Challenge Cup break two months ago.

Canucks are a solid second in the lowly Smythe Division with a 25-42-12 record for 62 points, seven back of leading Chicago Black Hawks. And, if the Canucks gain a point Friday in their final regular-season game against Minnesota, they will finish with 63 points, the same number they had nine years ago when they entered the NHL as an expansion franchise.

Captain Don Lever and winger Jere Gillis have been the forwards who have drawn the bulk of the short-handed assignments from Neale as the Canucks have killed off 80 per cent of the minor penalties they've been assessed. They also happened to score the Vancouver goals against Colorado.

The Canucks will play either Philadelphia Flyers or New York Rangers in the first round of the Stanly Cup playoffs next week.

Meanwhile, New York Islanders still have a chance to finish ahead of Montreal Canadiens in the over-all standings.

The Islanders fought back to beat Atlanta Flames 3-2, Pittsburgh Penguins edged St. Louis 3-2, Washington Capitals surprised Los Angeles Kings 6-2 and Minnesota North Stars downed Chicago 4-3 in other games.

Goals by Ivan Boldirev and Darcy Rota gave the Flames an early lead, before the Islanders began their comeback on Dave Lewis's second-period goal. Bryan Trottier's 46th goal, equalling his career season high, tied the score early in the third period, with Billy Harris firing the winner from his back after being tripped in front of the Atlanta goal at 12:39 of the final period.

Kim Davis, playing in his first NHL game, scored the winning goal on a 25-footer at 8:58 of the third period as the Penguins clinched second place in the Norris Division and tied a club record with 13 road victories for the season.

Al MacAdam's tie-breaking goal with 40 seconds gone in the third period enabled Minnesota to beat Chicago and break a five-game losing streak while ending the Black Hawks' five-game undefeated string.

Tug-of-War Threatens The New Peace Treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — A tug-of-war over the rights to Swedish winger Benjt Gustavson between Washington Capitals and Edmonton Oilers could challenge the new peace treaty made by the National Hockey League and the World Hockey Association, the Washington Star said Tuesday.

Gustavsson was drafted by the Capitals last June but is believed to have signed with the Oilers, one of four WHA teams involved in NHL expansion next year," two weeks ago.

The Oilers will not admit they have the 21-year-old Gustavsson under contract until the NHL-WHA expansion deal is completed next month, the Star reported. Then the Oilers are expected to argue he is their property.

"Gustavsson has already signed with Edmonton," said European scout Arne Stromberg, who helped the Caps sign Swedish imports Rolf Edberg and Leif Svensson for this season and aided in the selection of Gustavsson in the fourth round of last year's amateur draft.

"Now, Stromberg is advising Caps general manager Max McNab to go after Gustavsson, described by the scout as "bigger and taller than Edberg, just as sound technically and ready to play in the NHL."

Under the expansion agreement, the Oilers can protect two players and two goalies on a priority list, exposing all other players with NHL ties to an immediate recall from the NHL cut. The Oilers are going to protect 18-year-old Wayne Gretzky, the Star said, and might protect Gustavsson, also.

"We're not sure what is going to happen," said McNab. "Whatever decision that will be made, will be made without any panic."

Larry Gordon, general manager of the Oilers, is in Hawaii this week and was unavailble for comment about Gustavsson.

The Star said, however, he has told reporters in Edmonton there will be a news conference soon to announce that Gustavsson has signed with the Oilers.

Seine Fishermen Reap The Goldstream Benefits

Volunteer organizations in the Amalgamated Conservation Society that have rebuilt the stocks of coho salmon and steelhead fry in the Goldstream system appear to be fighting a losing battle when it comes to returns of adult fish.

In the report on their activities for 1978, the ACS points out that "evidence indicates there has recently been a major increase in the size of the drum seiner fleet . . . which relates to the depletion of Goldstream spawners and other wild stocks."

In addition, they explain the efficiency of the fleet has been increased and there's been a major shift in operations into the southern Strait of Georgia — especially off Sidney and Nanaimo.

Regular counts by the ASC show there were 172 coho spawners in Goldstream in 1978, compared with 103 in '77 and 107 in '76.

"The returns of fall fry in earlier years indicate there should have been well over 500 coho spawners returning from the 28,000 fall fry here in 1976," explains the report.

An additional 300 spawners would have a production potential of over 3,000 more adults "without a significant increase in cost or effort."

Fall fry production in the Goldstream system has more than doubled from 13,300 (1972-74) to 26,000 (1975-77) as a result of ACS efforts, which have included hatching the eggs in incubations boxes, providing more natural spawning and over-winter survival habitat through side-channel improvement and feeding of fry during the summer.

Now it's beginning to look as if the benefits of this increased coho production by volunteer sportsmen, coupled with input from Federal Fisheries, the provincial Fish and Wildlife Branch, Parks Branch and the Greater Victoria Water District, might be falling into the hands of commercial fishermen.

"The commercial catch increased from an average of 1,500 coho (1964-70) to 4,000 coho in recent years (1971-77) in Area 18 off Sidney," states the report.

"A major shift in drum seiners into southern Strait of Georgia areas 17 and 18 is indicated in catch data and in the annual reports of the International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Commission."

The report goes on to say the seine fleet is fishing for mixed stocks of sockeye and pinks within grilse nursery areas and for holding stocks of the coho and chinooks that have escaped the west coast troll and Strait of Juan de Fuca net fishery.

Related stream improvement projects are being carried out on Mary Vine Creek, DeMamiel Creek, the Sooke River, Matheson Creek and Henderson Creek, a tributary of Shawnigan Creek near Mill Bay.

In addition, the Rod Haig-Brown Flyfishers Club is carrying out an ACS-funded experiment with raising steelhead fry in the Goldstream. A total of 14,392 fry were produced in 1978 with an egg-to-fry survival rate of 64 per cent.

But, taking the loss of the coho spawners as an indication, the commercial fishery needs more fine tuning if the federal-provincial Salmonid Enhancement Program is to succeed.

Some interesting facts cropped up in a recent federal study comparing cross-country and downhill skiing . . . Cross-country skiers have a higher average income and education, are older and more likely to be married than downhill skiers . . . Cross-country skiers are equally split between male and female but the downhill skiers are more often male . . . The report also confirms that cross-country skiing is growing at a faster rate than downhill . . . In addition, the survey shows that both types of skiers spent $118.6 million on equipment and supplies in 1974, more than the combined total spent on hockey equipment and all racquet sports.

Plans are now underway to stage the 12th annual B.C. Salmon Derby . . . For a $12 fee, fishermen will be able to enter 10 fish in the derby which runs from July 1 to Sept. 3 with all of the ticket proceeds going to Variety Club childrens charities . . . A $25,000 hidden weight prize will go to the fisherman who catches a salmon matching a pre-determined mystery weight over five pounds . . . A $10,000 prize goes to the fisherman landing the heaviest salmon and weight handicaps for specific areas have been eliminated.

Shorts-Dropped, Pay Docked

LONDON (AP) — Arsenal soccer star Sammy Nelson was fined and suspended for two matches Wednesday after dropping his shorts in an angry gesture to fans during Tuesday's league match against Coventry City.

The incident occurred after Nelson, who has been booed by fans after scoring an own goal, scored an equalizer for Arsenal. He ran behind the goal and dropped his shorts in full view of spectators.

Arsenal chairman Dennis Hill-Wood, who said he was "very angry" about the incident, met Arsenal manager Terry Neill after the 1-1 draw at Highbury and Neill called in Nelson Wednesday morning to tell him of the club's decision.

Nelson was already due to miss Saturday's league match against Liverpool because of a Football Association suspension. He will now also miss Arsenal's local Derby match with Tottenham on Tuesday, and will not be paid for two weeks.

Nuggets Still on Move Despite Loss of Stars

By The Canadian Press

Denver Nuggets managed their first victory without injured forward George McGinnis. But they were forced to finish Tuesday night's game without David Thompson, who found himself at loggerheads with the men in the striped shirts.

Denver climbed into a first-place tie with Kansas City in the Midwest Division of the National Basketball Association on the strength of a 110-97 victory over New Jersey Nets. But Thompson watched the outcome from the dressing room.

He picked up his first technical foul with 9:50 remaining in the third quarter after spitting at referee Jess Kersey when the official failed to whistle a foul against New Jersey's Jan van Breda Kolff.

Thompson had taken off on one of his patented skywalking missions and was fouled in desperation by van Breda Kolff. But no foul was called — by Kersey, Joe Geshue or Bob McAllister.

"I could have possibly gotten hurt on that play," Thompson said. "A foul as obvious as that should be called. When you have the ball, somebody should be watching. Especially with three officials."

Van Breda Kolff admitted he fouled Thompson in an attempt to avoid a potential three-point play.

"Once he got around me, I was desperate," said van Breda Kolff. "I grabbed him and just held onto him so he wouldn't get hurt. Apparently the referee was screened out because no foul was called. I was deliberately fouling him to avoid a three-point play."

The 6-foot-4 Thompson went into a rage and spit in the direction of Kersey. He was immediately hit with a technical.

Thompson and team-mate Charlie Scott each picked up technicals as they were talking to each other while bringing the ball upcourt with 2:15 left in the game.

"If you can't talk to your team-mate something has to be done," Thompson said.

McAllister thought otherwise, claiming Thompson and Scott were verbally abusing him.

Elsewhere Tuesday, New Orleans Jazz routed Boston Celtics 141-125, Los Angeles Lakers edged Chicago Bulls 97-95, Houston Rockets nipped New York Knicks 116-115, San Antonio Spurs defeated Cleveland Cavaliers 1116-112, Golden State Warriors downed Detroit Pistons 104-100 and Portland Trail Blazers beat Seattle SuperSonics 106-102.

The victory was Denver's eighth in nine games and first in two tries without McGinnis, out for the year with torn ligaments in his left ankle.

Spencer Haywood and Gale Goodrich scored 26 points each to lead New Orleans past Boston in a battle of the NBA's have-nots.

Tom Owens scored 24 points, including a five-footer over Jack Sikma with 36 seconds remaining, to pace Portland to its ninth win in its last 10 starts. The Trail Blazers never trailed after the first quarter and led by as many as 12 points in the third period. But the SuperSonics came back to slice the Portland lead to two on several occasions in the final minutes.

Members voted at the regular monthly meeting at the Ingraham Hotel to reject the latest proposal by Western and to carry on with plans to move to Nanaimo.

Western Speedway and VITRA have been unable to agree on a contract this season.

VITRA is inviting local open cars to race three dates at Grandview Bowl in Nanaimo. These dates were not announced.

Race dates announced were May 6, 12; June 2, 23; July 7, 15; Aug. 4-6, Aug. 25 and Sept. 8.

Everton's Hopes Fade

LONDON (Reuter) — Everton's slender hopes of catching Liverpool at the top of the English soccer league's First Division virtually disappeared Tuesday night when the team lost 3-1 to Bolton.

Trevor Ross gave second-place Everton the lead with a penalty, but Willie Morgan, Neil Whatmore and Garry Jones replied for Bolton, which moved clear of the relegation area.

Wolverhampton overcame Saturday's Football Association Cup semi-final defeat to Arsenal with a 3-2 win against Tottenham.

Tottenham went ahead early on through Chris Jones. John Richards scored an equalizer just before half time, but Jones then added his second goal to put the visitors ahead again.

Steve Daley quickly equallized, but Wolves needed an injury time effort by skipper. Kenny Hibbitt to make sure of victory.

Kevin Mabbutt scored twice to give Bristol City a 2-0 triumph against Queen's Park Rangers, which sent the London club nearer the Second Division.

Birmingham City, another struggling side, forced a fighting 1-1 draw against Ipswich. Dutchman Arnold Muhren put Ipswich ahead in the 35th minute, but Joe Gallagher grabbed a goal back in the second half.

Arsenal showed some reaction from the Cup clash and could only draw 1-1 at home to Coventry. Sammy Nelson scored for both sides. He turned a Don Nardiello cross into his own Arsenal goal, then made amends by firing home a 20-yard drive.

NATIONAL WOMEN'S BASKETBALL TEAM AT UVIC

Canada's Finest Here For Camp

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

Don McCrae and 30 of the country's finest female basketball players move into town Friday for what may be the first of several national training camps in a variety of sports in Victoria.

McCrae, coach of the University of Waterloo Warriors men's team, got the go-ahead for the UVic training site after the Canadian Amateur Basketball Association considered additional bids from UBC and the B.C. Institute of Technology.

McCrae has until camp break-up April 21 to pare the 30 hopefuls down to about a dozen and hone them into form for the world championships in Korea April 27-May 13. The team will leave for Seoul from Victoria.

The women will remain together for the Pan-American Games in Puerto Rico July 1-15 and the World Student Games in Mexico Sept. 2-12.

The emphasis at McKinnon gym will be on training. No major exhibition games are planned.

Ken Shields, McCrae's liaison at UVic, said the first cuts will probably be made after three days of training, paring the squad down to 16.

Four Greater Victoria players will take part in the camp — Carol Turney and Karen McComber of Home Lumber and Luanne Hebb and Michele Belanger of UVic Vikettes. Jane Favali of the Vikettes was also invited but will pass up the camp to rest a knee injury suffered during the season.

Meanwhile, prospects of landing the national pre-Olympic rowing camp at Elk Lake next spring brightened considerably following three meetings this week to form the Victoria Rowing Society.

Ted Sawchuck, one of UVic's representatives on the rowing society formation committee, said facilities may be built at Elk Lake to accomodate UVic, the Victoria City Rowing Club and other schools or groups interested in taking up the sport. Claremont secondary has indicated it may purchase a shell.

The rowing society meetings have involved delgates from Victoria City, UVic and the B.C. Rowing Association.

If new facilities materialize, Sawchuck said they could include a boathouse with locker room, weight training room, shower facilities and a new dock.

"Facilities like these would be pretty expensive," he added. "Hopefully, we would be able to get some government funding."

New facilities would also add weight to arguments aimed at getting the pre-Olympic trials. The annual meeting of the Canadian Amateur Rowing Association is scheduled for Victoria in November and UVic rowing coach Al Morrow expects a bid will be made for the trials at that time.

The 1980 Olympics take place in Mosocow in July and Canada would send as many as 30 rowers from a field of 40 or 50 at trials here, Morrow said. The date of the Olympics means the trials must take place early in the spring to give the rowers time for competition in Europe during May and June.

"This is the only area of the country with open water at that time of the year," Sawchuck pointed out.

"I'd say we'd be the odds-on favorite to get the trials if we put in a good pitch," Morrow added.

Canadian Heavyweight Stopped in First Round

HALIFAX (CP) — Trevor Berbick of Halifax, Canada's only remaining contender for international heavyweight boxing honors, was knocked out at 2:57 of the first round Tuesday night after being struck by a solid right to the jaw by Bernardo Mercado, the World Boxing Council's heavyweight champion of Central America ans the Caribbean.

Berbick swarmed over the Colombian in the opening minutes of the fight, pressing him against the ropes and hammering away with punches.

Berbick was 12 pounds lighter than the 220-pound Mercado.

"I've been handling fights for 12 years and I've never seen anything thrown as hard as that," referee Herb MacMullen said after the fight that boosted Mercado's record to 22-2 and left Berbick at 11-1.

Saanich Wins In Overtime

Saanich and Port Alberni had tied for first place in the eight-team, round-robin event, each with six wins and one defeat for 12 points.

New Westminster finished third with 10 points.

Bird Flies to Phillies In 'Steal' of the Year

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP) — Philadelphia Phillies could have come up with the "steal" of the year Tuesday when they acquired veteran pitcher Doug Bird from Kansas City Royals for Todd Cruz, an untested rookie shortstop.

The 29-year-old Bird experienced an off-season in 1978, winning and losing six games with a 5.29 earned-run average, but his lifetime record belies that performance.

The 6-foot-4 right-hander had been with the Royals six years and posted a 49-36 record with a 3.56 ERA. He holds the club record for most games — 292 — and saves — 58. This spring he was 1-1 with a 3.46 ERA in seven appearances, all in relief.

Two years ago with the Royals, Bird was 11-3, and saved 14 games in the final two months of the season as Kansas City won the second of its three straight American League West Division titles.

It's easy to see why Paul Owens, the Phillies' personnel director, was willing to make the deal. He has a crippled pitching staff, including reliever Warren Brusstar, just placed on the 21-day disabled list with a strained shoulder. Bird will start the season in the bullpen.

The Phillies — with starters Larry Christenson, Dick Ruthven, Steve Carlton, and Jim Lonborg all nursing injuries or subject to chronic ailments — need pitchers if they hope to win a fourth consecutive National League East championship.

But what was Kansas City's hurry to unload Bird, still young enough if healthy to win a lot of games, for a rookie shortstop whose best batting average was .261 in 121 games at Oklahoma City in the Triple A American Association last season? Conceded, Cruz is a fine fielder, but he's never done it in the majors.

Apparently Royals manager Whitey Herzog has given up on shortstop Fred Patek, 34, at 5-foot-4 one of the smallest players in baseball. Patek hit only .248 last season, is reported to have back problems and has slowed somewhat in the field.

The Phillies sent Cruz, who hit 11 homers and drove in 69 runs for Oklahoma City, to the Royals' Omaha farm team.

Manzini Gets Job With NASL Drillers

Gordie Manzini of Victoria Athletics is going to get a chance in pro soccer.

Manzini, 26, who has finished his second season with the A's, has been signed to a professional contract by Edmonton Drillers of the North American Soccer League.

Originally from Nanaimo and a graduate of the University of Victoria program, Manzini played for the Vancouver Island All-Stars against the Drillers in their two recent exhibition games on the Island and impressed coach Hans Kraay with his talent.

"It was an honor to have them notice me," said Manzini, who was contacted by the Drillers last week.

He flew to Edmonton, Monday, returned to Victoria, Tuesday, resigned his teaching post at Cedar Hill Junior Secondary, and will be in uniform for the Drillers in their season opener against Vancouver Whitecaps in Vancouver, Friday.

Drillers have been having problems filling their sweeper position and that is where Manzini is expected to play.

Manzini was a member of UVic's national championship team in 1975 and then played a season with Simon Fraser.

Doping Greatest Danger To Games Future: Killanin

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (Reuter) — Doping of athletes is the greatest danger to the future of the Olympic Games, far outweighing threats of political interference or breaches of rules on amateurism, International Olympic Committee president Lord Killanin says.

In an interview in the IOC's official Monthly Review, he said muscle-building anabolic steroids, which athletes are banned from taking, created "a false person, whether man or woman."

"These are artificial people who have come out of a test-tube. But the aim of sport, and particularly the Olympic sports, is to create healthy and whole beings," Killanin said.

Killanin added that he had promised to review an IOC rule defining amateur status and athletes' eligibility for the Olympic Games. But he considered the general terms of the rule were satisfactory, and he remained opposed to opening the Games to professionals as well as amateurs.

Killanin said he had nothing against professionalism, adding that his son, Michael Morris, is a professional steeplechase jockey in Ireland.

"But to open the Games is to put them immediately into the hands of impresarios. Look at tennis. Developments there are disturbing because the impresarios are in charge through the intermediary of the national federations," he said.

He said the IOC eligibility rule allowed athletes to be compensated for financial loss due to absence from work because of sports commitments.

But he said he was concerned about such payments being made to people who were full-time athletes, although not true professionals.

Taiwan Offers, Name Change For Olympics

By GEOFFREY MILLER

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) — Sports officials of Taiwan offered concessions Tuesday to help bring athletes from mainland China into next year's Olympic Games in Moscow.

Members of the Taiwan National Olympic Committee went before the executive board of the International Olympic Committee (IOC), which is trying to melt down the hard political differences between the two sides and have them both compete in the 1980 Games.

Henry Hsu, IOC member for Taiwan who headed the delegation, said his island country, disowned by the United Nations and no longer recognized by the United States at policial levels, would be ready to meet the Communist Chinese halfway.

"We told the executive board we would be ready to call ourselves the Olympic Committee of China (Taipei) if the other side agreed to call themselves the Olympic Committee of China (Peking)", Hsu said.

"We would also be ready to march in the opening ceremony of the Olympic Games without our national flag, but only if the Peoples Republic of China was willing to do the same. We want to see the athletes of mainland China in the Games, but the two Chinas must be treated on an equal basis."

The IOC has recognized Taiwan under the name of the Republic of China for 25 years, ever since the Communist takeover of the mainland. The All China Sports Federation in Peking has applied for IOC recognition but insists that Taiwan must be disowned and Taiwanese athletes compete as members of an all-China team directed from Peking.

Hsu said: "The name Republic of China is political. I have told our government we should be ready to drop it for the Olympic Games, which have nothing to do with politics, if that will help to solve this problem. But there must be give and take on both sides."

Taiwan's offer to change its name for the Olympics was a breakthrough. In 1976 the Taiwanese refused to do this when the Canadian government withheld entry visas for their athletes, and they were kept out of the Montreal Olympics.

Son Zhong, secretary general of the Peking group, sent a message that he would like to meet Hsu for a face-to-face talk.

"But I don't think so, not at this time," Hsu said. Both sides will be called separately to talk to the IOC next Friday.

Peking's hopes of pushing Taiwan out of the Olympics received a setback in London when a High Court judge ruled Monday that the expulsion of Taiwan by the International Amateur Athletic Federation was invalid. The federation had voted to recognize Peking and drop Taiwan.

"That decision is bound to influence the thinking of IOC members here," Hsu said.

TUPPER LAKE, N.Y. (AP) — Officials in this tiny Adirondack village are "angry, outraged and disappointed" after being left off the preferred ticket list for the 1980 Winter Olympics, despite the fact that its motel and hotel rates will be subject to state control during the games.

Tupper Lake, a village of about 5,000, and the town of Altamont are less than 40 miles from Lake Placid, site of the Winter Games. Olympic officials have said they will allocate 50,000 tickets to a preferred area surrounding Lake Placid. But that area does not include Tupper Lake.

Officials of Tupper Lake complained of the situation Tuesday in a letter to Petr Spurney, the Games' executive director. The officials asked that a change be made to include the village.

"It is felt that such a change would not necessarily increase the number of reserved tickets to this area, but would certainly foster an improved and continued feeling of goodwill," the letter said.

Spurney was not available for comment, but Robert O'Hanesian, admissions director for the Lake Placid Olympic Organizing Committee, said he doubted if such a change would be made.

For starters, the 30th annual Vancouver Island Open match-play golf championship will be a study of good conduct rather than good play.

Play for the CFAX Trophy begins Sunday with the qualifying round at Glen Meadows and the initial emphasis will be on observance of rules.

The District Golf Committee served warning, loud and clear, that it will continue to crack down on golfers' casual attitudes towards rules and regulations.

While the Island Open heralds the start of the summer campaign, the committee will carefully monitor rule violations in three particular areas throughout the season. The three concerns are slow play, proper dress and failure to produce properly-attested British Columbia Golf Association handicap cards.

"Our goal is to get rounds in all district tournaments completed in four hours or less," said Jim Taylor, one of Uplands' representatives on the committee. "Five-hour rounds are too commonplace, too ridiculous."

Any individual or foursome found guilty of lagging will be penalized.

Sloppy attire will not be tolerated, committee chairman Bob Bell said.

"They don't have to look as if they stepped out of a page from Esquire," said Bell, "but they don't have to look like something the cat dragged in. A neat pair of slacks and a nice t-shirt . . . that's all that it takes."

Each club affiliated with the District Committee has a dress code. The code of the club being used for a tournament event will prevail. Anyone showing up in attire that does not comply with the dress code will not be allowed to tee off.

Presentation of BCGA handicap cards will be a must, as was the case last year in both district and provincial tournaments. Golfers failing to produce their handicap cards will be slapped with a two-stroke penalty. If the card is not produced before the final day, the offending player will be disqualified.

Good conduct aside, there also should be good play.

The southpaw Beauchemin is scheduled to return home this week after his winter tour of the Asian, New Zealand and Australian circuit.

Hornets Trim Bays

If Tuesday's exhibition games is any indication, the Vancouver Island Junior Bantam Football League is going to be wide open this season.

The defending champion Saanich Hornets defeated Oak Bay Bays 62-30 in a pre-season exhibition at Royal Athletic Park. It was the debut for the Bays, a new club in the league this year.

Gary Layton scored four touchdowns and Wayne Shiplap and Doug Waldie each scored two for Saanich while Gerry Dardengo and George McGregor each scored two for Oak Bay.

The other Saanich touchdown was scored by Paddy Wyman. Ian Woodcock kicked four conversions.

Ambitious Budgets Aim at Puerto Rico Gold

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Victoria Budgets have set up another ambitious schedule, one that is certain to please the followers of Canada's senior men's softball champions, but the home stand will not include "the big series."

That will be Budgets' visit, as Canada's representatives, to Puerto Rico for the Pan-American Games in July.

And, barring interference, the Budget braintrust thinks the team can come back with the gold medal.

"This will probably as good a team as we've ever had in Victoria," said general manager Jack Bell.

And Budgets, starting out in softball life as Bates, have had some "good ones," including a lineup that brought Canada a share of the world championship in 1976.

"Someone in Sport Canada asked if we could win a bronze medal at the Pan-Am Games," said Bell. "We told them we didn't accept the invitation to think about a bronze or silver medal. We accepted it to win the gold, and I think we can.

"Providing," he added quickly, "they don't interfere."

"They" being the Canadian government and the Canadian Amateur Softball Association.

Under terms of Victoria's acceptance, Budgets will supply 14 of the 18 players that will be registered with the Pan-Am Games committee. Four additions will be recruited after a CASA-supervised, three-day "training camp" at Royal Athletic Park April 30, May 1 and 2.

Twelve players from across Canada have been invited to the camp to see if Budgets' lineup can be strengthened.

Budget field boss Harvey Stevenson will be included on the selection committee but he, Bell and team president-sponsor Mark Scott are a bit apprehensive.

"A couple of our players will have to work their way onto the Games' team," said Bell. "We don't want to be forced into taking someone that won't do the job.

"That's when the battle may start because we (Budgets) won't allow our team to be decimated."

Even without additions, Stevenson, Bell and Scott all feel Victoria can still field a strong contender.

Three familiar players won't be returning. Catcher-first baseman Bob Burrows, the big home run threat, has left to join Edmonton's entry in the pro Western Canada League. Pitcher Stan Kern and first baseman Pete Songhurst both have retired. Songhurst is staying on with the team as a director.

Despite the losses, Stevenson feels Budgets have improved because of the return of pitcher Dave Ruthowsky and the additions of southpaw pitcher Mark Smith, first-baseman Bob Walton and catcher Sonny Phillips.

Stevenson predicts that while Walton and Phillips may not match Burrows' home-run contributions, both will add consistent and "higher average" hitting to Victoria's offense.

Again, Budgets will play in the tough Northwest International League, which has added Abbotsford and Vancouver to returning teams from Woodinville, Seattle Westside, Tacoma, Longview, Seattle Peterbilt and Yakima.

In addition to 34 league games, Budgets also have set up an extensive exhibition schedule which includes 24 "Super Series" games at Royal Athletic Park. Saskatoon, Edmonton Sundrillers, Springfield, Mo., Wooster, Mass., Santa Rosa, Calif., and Portland Ray Bristowes will visit Victoria.

The home campaign gets under way with Budgets playing Woodinville in league play April 28-29.

BRIEFLY: Budgets have adopted a tough conditioning program . . . "They hated it," said Bell, "but don't mind it now and you'll see the benefits in August. That's when they've lagged in the past but you won't see them dragging their butts this year". . . Budgets have moved outdoors for training now and Phillips and Smith have been impressive . . . They rate Smith "almost as fast" as Kern at his best . . . Phillips, suggests Bell, has a rifle rather than a throwing arm . . . Warren Campbell, an infielder up from the Stuffy McGinnis League, and Mike Taaffe, who played with Bates before "retiring" to the McGinnis League three years ago, are bidding for the obvious vacancy in the lineup.

Pete Landers, who came to Campbell River and played with Victoria briefly, has left Red Deer and returned to Oshawa Tonys . . . Pete Brown, the other pitching standout in the Western Canada League last season, left Camrose for a lucrative offer from Aurora, Ill. . . Newmarket, Ont., is bidding to be included on Victoria's "Super Series" schedule.

Horseshoe Pitchers Can Register Sunday

Facilities have been expanded and enthusiasm appears to have followed the trend as the Greater Victoria Horseshoe Pitching Association prepares for the opening of a new season.

Now with 18 courts, an increase of six from last year, the association has scheduled registration for new players, including women and juniors, for Sunday at Glanford Park.

The sign-up session, running from 10 a.m. until 1 p.m., will also include registration of shoe-tossers for league play, which will be on a handicap system with four-player teams.

Association officials, encouraged by increased interest in the horseshoe pastime, are expecting a considerable boost im membership, much of it probably coming from players in the over-60 age bracket.

Scholarship For Pettinger

Glen Pettinger, a 17-year-old who has played for the Saanich Hornets club since he was 12, has signed a letter of intent to attend Simon Fraser University on a four-year football scholarship.

League Accepts Entry from Fernie

KIMBERLEY (CP) — The Western International Hockey League, plagued by the departures of two teams this season, has agreed to allow Fernie to enter a team for the 1979-80 season.

The new team, organized under the name Elk Valley Senior Hockey Association, joins Kimberley Dynamiters, Trail Smoke Eaters and Cranbrook Royals, three of five teams that started the season.

Calgary Stampeders and Nelson Maple Leafs dropped out of the league for financial reasons. Nelson is expected to apply in June to re-enter the league.

The Store That Has It All!

Now That B.C. Is Sorry, Houses Can Come Down

The provincial government has apologized to Victoria city hall for jumping the gun in starting to demolish five old houses in the legislative precinct before getting permits.

And now that the government has said it's sorry the houses, or what's left of them, can come down.

Council's land use and planning committee approved the demolitions after Mayor Mike Young said he received an apology for the government's premature action from Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis.

In a letter to the mayor, Curtis said the B.C. Buildings Corp. now only wants to knock down four of the houses, at 415 Heather, 528 Michigan, 131 Government and 515 Superior.

The corporation has withdrawn its request to demolish the fifth house at 321 Menzies and will try to rent the building.

The fuss over the demolitions started when council discovered that although the BCBC had applied for demolition permits, the house at 515 Superior had already been largely dismantled.

Council protested to the government, and some aldermen publicly complained that city hall was being bulldozed by big government.

In other matters, the committee received a letter from Transport Minister Otto Lang saying that a private consultant had been hired to advise the government on buildings planned for the new Coast Guard station.

Council has been complaining about the design of some of the buildings, but until Lang's letter arrived it seemed the Coast Guard was going to ram through its development as planned.

The federal government does not have to meet local zoning requirements, so Victoria was unable to block the plans.

But at a recent council meeting Ald. Bob Wright warned the city could have the last laugh by refusing to hook up the power and water services to the base.

That threat apparently paid off, and the government is now redesigning its buildings more to the city's liking.

On another development matter, the planning committee voted to demolish the Victoria Visitor's Information Centre building on the Inner Harbor causeway.

The committee also approved the expenditure of $27,500 for grass and landscaping at the site.

City's Janitor Costs Crazy: Wright

Ald. Bob Wright wants city hall to clean up its act a little when it comes to the cost of janitorial services.

Wright complained at a planning committee meeting Tuesday about housekeeping costs at the city-owned Health and Welfare Building, 1947 Cook.

Wright said the building, which is rented out, was bringing in a yearly gross of $77,000 — but then the city was turning around and spending $35,000 on janitorial services.

"That's got to be crazy," said Wright.

"I admit it's high," said municipal manager Jim Bramley.

"Well, somebody should do something about it. I mean, how long would we last in private enterprise?" asked Wright.

Ald. John Hayes agreed that Wright had reason to be upset, saying the $35,000 figure was about double what should be expected.

Bramley said he'd take a careful look at the situation

Parking Fine In Oak Bay Jumps to $5

A recommendation that fines for overstaying the two-hour parking limit in the Oak Bay village be raised from $2 to $5 has been approved by council.

Aldermen also approved a street and traffic committee recommendatin that offenders be fined $10, up from $5, if the ticket is not paid within seven days.

Municipal administrator Jim Craven, who made a parking study, said $2 tickets are an administrative nightmare because they cost more to write than they are worth.

"We decided to make the fine more appropriate," he said.

CUPE Bargainers Turn To Members on Talks

Negotiators for five Victoria area locals of the Canadian Union of Public Employees will seek direction from their members on stalled contract talks with their employers.

Jim Walker, spokesman for the Joint Negotiating Committee which is bargaining for the five locals, said Tuesday the negotiators will make recommendations.

However, he would not say what the negotiators are suggesting or whether there will be a vote on the employers' latest offer of 7.25 per cent in each year of a two-year agreement.

Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith, chairman of the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association which bargains for the employers, said Monday the offer is final and he expects the CUPE locals to put it to membership votes.

The last reported demand from the CUPE locals was for a 17-per-cent increase in a one-year agreement.

Talks between the JNC and the GVLRA, assisted by mediator Clark Gilmour, reached an impasse Tuesday and Walker said the decision was made to go back to the members for direction.

NDP Queries Expense Claim

An NDP member of the legislature's Crown corporations committee Tuesday questioned the expenses claimed by its former chairman and now Tourism Minister Elwood Veitch.

Dennis Cocke (New Westminster) said between Sept. 26 and Oct. 10 last year, Veitch claimed expenses for 13 meetings.

But the committee which looks into Crown corporations actually only met twice, he said. During those three weeks Veitch received $720 expenses.

Veitch said Cocke knows full well that the chairman works almost full time at the job. All he gets in return is $1,000 stipend as chairman and a $50 per diem the days he works.

Veitch said he collected about $2,000 in per diem payments last year. But he said he worked many more days than he put in for.

"I can tell you I spent more than that. That job cost me money," he said.

Veitch said he worked many hours holding meetings with staff and sub-committees.

"He held meetings with himself," Cocke said. "it gave him a nice little extra income."

Cocke said that is the method the Social Credit government uses to keep its backbenchers quiet.

Owner of Pot Boat 'Worked With Police'

A member of the Acapulco Yacht Club in Mexico provided the boat which brought 13.5 tons of marijuana to B.C. last summer, a drug conspiracy trial in county court was told Tuesday.

The member, identified as Nilo Batista, an unindicted co-conspirator, also received more than $100,000 as his rental of the boat to various individuals in addition to an official $3,000 from the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration for expenses, possibly fuel, DEA special agent Arthur Richard Vandiver testified in cross-examination.

Five Canadians are accused of conspiracy to import marijuana with 14 named persons and persons unknown between April 1 and July 16, 1978; importing marijuana between the same dates; and possession of marijuana on July 15 for the purpose of trafficking.

They are: Garth Clarence Vincent Joseph Sexton, 27, of Vancouver; Ronald Cecil Spurrell, 31, of Surrey; Frederick Charles Scott, 28, of Vancouver; John Mobley Doss, 25, of Dillon, Colorado, formerly of Newfoundland; and Frank Piersanti, 28, of Montreal.

The 14 persons named but not charged in the indictment before the jury are Batista, Maurice Pereira, Neil Maxwell Kennedy, Terrance Gerard Trainor, Kevin Gerard Gushue, Robert Sherman Miller, Gordon Barlow Tait, Frederick MacKintosh Tait, Allen Valenti, Patrick Joseph Murphy, Edwin Floyd Terry also known as Philip Stanley Ward, Melville Douglas Balfour, Jillian Penney and Vicki Hann.

Vandiver said he has been a DEA agent since 1973 and has served four years attached to the U.S. embassy in Mexico City.

He agreed that prior to his involvement, Batista was known as a drug smuggler, that he had been arrested before, that he had contacts in Colombia and that he owned boats.

Asked if there is a great deal of graft and corruption in Mexico, he said "yes, it has a reputation in that way."

He agreed Batista has not been charged in connection with this case and as far as he knew, he was still in Acapulco.

The $3,000 officially paid him by the U.S. government was in cash and a receipt was given, he said. He did not have personal knowledge if the money was to fuel and provision a boat but it was for expenses, possibly for fuel.

Vandiver also said he met Pereira, whom he described as a part-Portuguese boat captain who lives in France and who was skipper of Batista's boat, the Toernyn, in connection with this case.

He said Pereira knew there would be marijuana aboard and the skipper was co-operating with the DEA. No charges against him were contemplated in connection with this case.

Pereira was in the same position as Batista, he said, working with the police.

Vandiver agreed there was an arrangement with Batista that he would be protected from prosecution and keep the rental for his boat.

Asked if separate rental payments of $100,000 and $45,000 were made to Batista, Vandiver said he knew of two payments totalling $100,000.

He agreed that he co-operated with the RCMP, basically from the beginning, and that on May 30, 1978, there was a meeting in Mexico City of various RCMP and DEA officers.

Asked if he had made any effort to have Batista appear in Victoria as a witness, he replied that he didn't believe the man would appear.

Asked if Batista has a high lifestyle and lots of money, he said it appeared that way.

Vandiver told the prosecution he had a conversation with Batista April 16, 1978, and was told Batista had met with two Canadians and a Colombian in Mexico City and they had agreed to a large-scale smuggling operation.

The names of the two Canadians were given as Philip Ward and Robert Miller.

Vandiver said he went to Acapulco on May 1 and met two Canadians on Batista's boat. He posed as a representative of Lloyd's of London to certify the boat for charter. He said Batista introduced him to Philip Ward and a woman named Vicki.

He said he next saw Ward at the preliminary hearing in Victoria and met Pereira again at Puntarenas, Costa Rica, on May 23 where he was captain of the Toernyn.

The trial was to continue today with the second witness.

Before the Judge

Two of three Colwood teen-agers were fined and the other was given community service work after they pleaded guilty in provincial court to causing a disturbance.

Lance Robert Aastrom, 17, of 2579 Rainville, and another 17-year-old, Randy Richard McLeod, 927 Bray, were charged jointly with causing a disturbance by screaming. Robin James Neeland, 18, of 2743 Spencer, pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance by fighting and obstructing a peace officer.

Crown counsel Robert Mullligan told Judge William Ostler the incident occurred about 1 a.m. Feb. 3 after residents complained to Colwood RCMP about a rowdy disturbance in the 2600-block Wentwich.

At least two officers were grabbed during the melee, court was told.

Asked if they had anything to say, Aastrom said he was yelling because he was being "beat upon by police." McLeod said he didn't know why he was charged because there were at least 40 persons screaming and the fighting was just between friends, and Neeland said he was just standing there when a police officer pushed him down, causing him to grab on to the policeman's sleeve for balance.

Ostler fined Aastrom and McLeod $35 each, levied an additional $25 fine on McLeod, who also pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance by fighting, and gave Neeland a suspended sentence, placed him on six months' probation and ordered him to perform 60 hours of community service work.

Mrs. Davis changed her plea to guilty on five counts of making false statements for unemployment insurance benefits and Crown counsel Harold Turnham withdrew two other counts on the same charge.

Turnham said the woman was working part and full time as a cashier with the Liquor Administration Branch while collecting UIC benefits and declaring she was not employed.

Turnham said Mrs. Davis received more than $600 to which she wasn't entitled but that complete restitution had been made last year.

Emberton's application for a discharge was based on the fact the woman was still employed as a cashier at liquor stores and was in a bondable position. He said his client was emotionally upset over the purchase of a house from a friend which wasn't what it was made out to be.

Turnham said he checked with the LAB and was informed an employee would not lose a job unless a jail sentence was imposed. Turnham said he was not asking Ostler to impose a jail term.

In rejecting Emberton's application, Ostler noted the nature of the offence, the susceptibility of the unemployment insurance fund and the propensity of such offences.

He levied $50 fines on each of the five counts.

Salt Spring Islander Fined For Cultivating Marijuana

A Salt Spring Island farmer was fined $500 in county court Tuesday for cultivating marijuana Sept. 30, 1977.

Lyle Alfred Hamilton-Horn, 38, pleaded guilty March 19. He also pleaded guilty to possession of a restricted weapon, a .22-calibre semi-automatic pistol, and was given a nominal one day in jail.

Court was told police found about 600 marijuana plants, in a field and in and around his house, together with bags of marijuana leaves, sufficient to last a heavy smoker three years.

But the court was also told Hamilton-Horn was not a commercial trafficker, had no criminal record, and is an industrious, hard-working, productive, well thought-of citizen supporting a wife and two sons.

Hamilton-Horn told Judge Peter Millward he was sorry and apoligized for what he did.

Millward said he would take into account the lapse of time since the offence, that there was no attempt to market the marijuana, and that the firearm had no necessary connection with cultivating marijuana.

He fined him $500, in default 30 days, on the cultivating offence and one day in jail on the firearm offence.

Light Switch To Cost $1.4M

When Victoria's city hall says "Let there be light," it has to back it up with some pretty hefty spending.

That much became clear Tuesday when city engineer John Sansom told council's public works committee that conversion of street lighting to a sodium vapor system will cost about $1.4 million.

He added, however, that sodium vapor lights require about 40 per cent of the power used by the mercury vapor lights that now brighten the town's night life.

Sansom said that based on 1978 costs the city would have saved $168,337 if it been using the sodium vapor system.

He suggested the city completely switch over to the cheaper lights because power costs are rising yearly.

"Let's face it," said Ald. Bob Wright. "The price of power is not going to go down, it's going up, so we've got to bite the bullet sooner or later."

The other committee members concurred but couldn't agree on whether the city should phase in the new lights over five years, spreading out the costs, or borrow money and pay for it all at once.

The committee finally decided simply to give Sansom's report a full endorsement and forward the matter to council's finance committee for a recommendation on how to pay for it.

. . . And $9,200 For Switchboard

Victoria's city hall is going to be hit with a massive phone bill next year, but at least people will be able to call in to complain about it.

Council's public works committee Tuesday endorsed a report recommending installation of a new telephone system at the hall.

The 25-year-old switchboard will be replaced by a gleaming, electronic board costing $9,220.

The committee was told the board, called a Focus II, is the latest piece of equipment available from B.C. Telephone.

Commissionaires To Lose Badges

City parking commissionaires are losing their special police constable badges and cards which they've held for years.

Deputy police chief Jim Smith said Tuesday the commissionaires have been asked to turn in their badges and cards which apparently should never have been issued in the first place.

Smith said that under the Police Act, special police constables must be hired by the police board.

But the commissionaire corps has nothing to with the board and never has. Its contract is solely with the city to assist in the enforcement of the parking bylaws.

Smith said a number of years ago the commissionaires were given the badges and cards "because it was felt they should have had status."

The error came to light last year when the B.C. Appeal Court ruled that a commissionaire is not a peace officer as defined by the code and thus not entitled to represent himself as a special police constable.

Nuclear Levels Normal

OTTAWA (UPC) — No unusual radiation readings have been recorded in Canada since a Pennsylvania nuclear plant started emitting radioactivity, government officials said Tuesday.

The departments of health and environment said 20 air samples by 13 monitoring stations in Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes showed only normal radiation levels during the last six days.

Courtney Garneau, spokesman for the Federal Radiation Protection Bureau, said the findings should allay fears raised by reports of abnormal levels in the state of Maine.

Charles Armentrout, a physics professor at the University of Southern Maine, claimed he had recorded high radiation levels in the state, possibly due to the damaged Three Mile Island nuclear facility at Harrisburg, Penn.

Independent tests by the provincial ministries of Quebec and Ontario substantiated federal findings.

Janet Ecker, spokesman for the Ontario ministry, said: "The data we have up to now, and information from the U.S. authorities, raises no concern at this time."

Radiation Trial Hears Mother

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The first phase of the $11.5-million Karen Silkwood plutonium contamination trial ended Tuesday after an emotional appearance by Miss Silkwood's mother.

Merle Silkwood, 52, of Nederland, Tex., said her daughter was "a perfect child" who was interested in bettering herself and helping others.

Earlier, Rosemary Porter, 26, of Beaumont, Tex., one of Karen Silkwood's younger sisters, testified that Miss Silkwood, frightened and hysterical, said she wanted to quit her job with the Kerr-McGee Corp. and believed she would be dead in five years.

Miss Silkwood's mother testified that during several telephone calls the last week and a half Karen Silkwood was alive, she was nervous, upset and concerned about her health.

"She told me there wasn't anything you could do if a person is exposed to radiation," Mrs. Silkwood said. "She said there is no cure."

About four days before she died in a Nov. 13, 1974, auto crash, Miss Silkwood had calmed down, Mrs. Silkwood testified. She added: "But I could tell from her voice something was wrong she wasn't telling me."

The Silkwood estate, which rested its case Tuesday, is suing the Kerr-McGee Corp. and a subsidiary for $11.5 million in damages, alleging negligence in connection with Miss Silkwood's plutonium contamination.

Kerr-McGee contends Miss Silkwood contaminated herself, possibly to dramatize claims about working conditions at its nuclear fuel plant where she was a lab technician.

Witnesses testified Karen Silkwood had proof of company falsification of nuclear reactor fuel rod quality control reports at the time of her death. The documentation has never surfaced, however.

N-Blast Fears Ease, Shutdown Prepared

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Freed from the threat of a hydrogen explosion, engineers today prepared a cautious shutdown of the crippled Three Mile Island nuclear furnace to end the crisis that has disruped thousands of lives.

"We have to heave a collective sigh of relief," said Gov. Dick Thornburgh.

Although civil defence authorities kept precautionary evacuation plans on a standby status, Thornburgh indicated he thought such a mass exodus would no longer be necessary.

"I'm glad we didn't have to test it out," the governor said in an interview on NBC's Today show.

Life in most towns around Three Mile Island gradually was returning to normal with some of the estimated 200,000 people who fled the area starting to trickle back home, despite continuing leaks of radiation.

The task engineers now faced was to reduce temperatures in the reactor from 280 degrees Fahrenheit to below the 212-degree boiling point and to simultaneously lower reactor pressures without further damaging the reactor's fuel or causing new radiation leaks.

There was no estimate how long the process might take.

Harold Denton, heading the Nuclear Regulatory Commission emergency team at the Susquehanna River plant site, said Tuesday he hoped to rapidly bring the United States' worst atomic power crisis to a conclusion. But he said no move would be made "before ... we've taken every precaution against (radiation) leaks."

Thornburgh, smiling broadly, told reporters Tuesday night: "The news this evening is better. I think we all can hold to a reasonable opinion that the prospects for a catastrophic event have lessened."

Still, Thornburgh advised pregnant women and preschool children to stay out of the area within five miles of the plant and ordered schools in that radius to remain closed today.

Make your move now and be ready for a great summer splash with our pre-season values!

Easy to Make Your Own Sausages

Making a case for the sausage

The first recorded sausage makers were the Romans. They preserved the smaller parts and scraps of the pig for winter eating. Probably the word sausage comes from a late Latin word, salsicia, meaning something prepared by salting.

Today, however, France is the country for fresh sausage. In every small town you'll find at least one charcuterie, a shop which sells the cooked meat of the pig. The mainstay of the charcutier will be transmutations of the pig, mostly sausages, but he will also sell companion foods like olives, breads and maybe a few salads, as well as uncooked pork.

Wish you had a charcutier in your neighborhood? No need to because its the easiest thing in the world to make your own sausage, especially if you have an electric mixer, processor or grinder with a sausage-making attachment.

Ideally, you'll need some casings for your sausage. These are prepared from lamb, pork and beef intestines and can be obtained from any butcher who makes his own sausage. Soak the skins overnight before using.

Next day push one end over the tap, run cold water through, then slip casing onto your sausage-making attachment. Now you are ready to stuff sausage. If you haven't a stuffer, with care, skins can be stuffed using a pastry bag with a plain metal attachment . . . squeeze mixture into casings.

Don't hold back if you don't fancy stuffing the casings. You'll miss a true gustatorial delight if you don't try making your own sausage meat. Make it up and after it matures a day or two form it into skinless sausages, small patties or balls. They are wonderful in cassoulets, soups, stews and as companions for eggs or potatoes.

Stack, using two layers of plastic wrap between patties. They'll keep in the refrigerator five to six days or in the freezer, wrapped well, up to two months. Simply remove number of patties required, re-wrap the remainder and return to the freezer.

COUNTRY STYLE SAUSAGE
(Makes 4 pounds)

4 pounds of boneless pork shoulder
1 tablespoon salt
1 tablespoon sage
1 teaspoon black pepper
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon nutmeg
½ cup water

Cut pork into chunks or thick strips, cutting away any sinew. Grind once using the fine blade of the meat grinder or twice using the coarse blade, according to the texture desired.

Combine seasonings; mix thoroughly with meat. Mix in water. Wrap in plastic wrap; refrigerate 24 to 36 hours for all seasonings to mingle.

Make into sausages or patties or shape into rolls 2½ inches in diameter. (Easy to slice off circles the thickness you like.) Wrap, refrigerate and use within 3 days or freeze for up to 2 months.

Link Sausages: Stuff lamb casings, twisting at about 3-inch lengths. Skinless finger sausages: Form into fingers 3 to 4 inches long. Roll in fine bread crumbs. Fry or boil.

Patties or Crepinettes: Form into flat patties. Flour or coat with crumbs. Fry or broil.

Sausage Meat: Use for stuffings and meat loaves. Pack into clean plastic containers or plastic bags. Pack all of the sausage mixture in a large intestine and tie ends. Or form it into a roll, wrap it in thin strips of salt pork or slices of bacon, then wrap completely with all-purpose cloth; tie cloth in place. Let it mature two days in the refrigerator, then use it within six days or keep in the freezer up to two months. To cook, simmer ½ hours. It will be ready-to-serve, hot or cold.

POTATO SAUSAGE
(Makes 4 pounds)

2 pounds boneless pork shoulder
1½ pounds lean stewing beef
1 pound raw potatoes
1 large onion, finely chopped
Lemon juice
1 tablespoon salt
½ teaspoon white pepper
½ teaspoon ginger
⅓ teaspoon allspice
Lamb casings

Rinse casings, let soak overnight. Grind pork and beef together with coarse blade of meat grinder. Peel and grate potatoes into a bowl of cold water to which a few drops of lemon juice have been added to prevent discoloration.

Drain potatoes well and press between clean towels to remove water. Combine ground meats, grated potato, onion, salt, pepper, ginger and allspice. Mix very thoroughly.

Attach sausage stuffer attachment to grinder. Push casing onto stuffer, letting some extend beyond end of attachment. Grind mixture through coarse plate of grinder, allowing it to fill casings.

Fill casings until firm but not overly full to make links 12 to 18 inches long. Tie ends with string. Before cooking prick casings at intervals to allow for escape of fat. Cook or wrap and freeze for up to two months.

Although spring is officially with us it will be several weeks before local green leafy vegetables are seen in produce displays. Meanwhile it is necessary to make the best of what is available.

Some mentioned today will not be found in stores but are still producing abundantly in home gardens. Talking about them now and showing how useful and delicious they can be with only the cost of growing, may induce more people to devote time to raising vegetables themselves in time otherwise spent in the current fad of exercising.

Since we serve green vegetables for very many vitamins and minerals, a good plan is to use some without cooking even though this may be a new idea to you and your family.

Green cabbage, washed briefly and dried on a cotton towel, then shredded fine with either a serrated knife or a shredder offer more nutrition than when cooked, and is more easily digested.

Raw cabbage certainly has a more delicate flavor and refreshing texture and less odor than when cooked. Serve with color accents of other vegetables and a tangy dressing of homemade yogurt with a few grains of sugar and salt.

If a lettuce is bought, either the leaf type which is really a better buy foodwise, or the head type, don't discard outer leaves just because they may be a little torn or discolored.

Washed briefly and broken into pieces, put them into the bottom of the saucepan where frozen or canned green beans or peas are to be cooked. Less water will be needed, and the slight flavor and the few nutrients of the lettuce will be added to the other vegetable. No waste, and another vegetable is added to the meal.

Celery is definitely a vegetable with a dual role. Again there is no waste. Outer stems are for soup flavoring, stir frying with Chinese Cabbage or in bean casseroles. Leaves go into salads together with the crisp inner stems, into soup, or as stuffing ingredients for savoring pastry rolls.

CELERY WITH BEET SALAD

250 ml diced celery
500 ml canned beet slices
OR
1 1 can whole small beets, drained

Dressing:

25 ml lemon juice
75 ml sunflower oil
1 ml salt
shake of pepper
2 ml sugar
1 hard boiled egg
Drain juice from canned beets if used, retaining for gravy or sauce another day.

Arrange beet slices or small whole beets in circle on green platter (or individual salad plates); pile small diced celery in centre.

Making dressing: whisk lemon juice, oil, salt, pepper and sugar in small bowl. Pour over celery.

Push hard boiled egg through a coarse sieve and sprinkle over all.

A light meal for four can be made by adding more hard boiled eggs either in slices or sieved, and serving with heated homemade wholewheat buns layered with cheddar cheese.

Local gardeners have swiss chard growing well now from last summer's sowing. It represents dollars of savings in dozens of meals that it improves. Chard is as tender and crisp as spinach, the young sprouts of green kale, or of collards, all of which can be producing now in home gardens.

Of these greens, only spinach is commonly seen for sale in vegetable displays. Chinese Cabbage or Wong Bok is very good used in similar ways, though as seen locally it has not the green color. It is however, very delicious, especially when uncooked.

CHARD OR SPINACH SALAD (A hot dish)

Estimate about 1000 ml fresh greens.
4 slices bacon

Dressing:

15 ml sugar
few grains of salt and pepper
15 ml chopped chives
1 hard boiled egg

Bacon is cooked until almost crisp. Remove from fat and cut or crumble into small pieces.

Meanwhile wash and dry spinach or chard leaves, patting in an old dish towel to remove all free moisture. Put into a large salad bowl.

Into bacon pan with a little of the fat, pour the mixed vinegar (or lemon juice) sugar, salt and pepper. Bring all to boiling point while stirring and pour at once over the bowl of greens.

Toss with two forks and serve at once with toasted cheese buns or rolls. Serves 4 to 5.

This is an unusual dish to many people, but most enjoy it as a salad which is not cold but warm and very tasty. The lemon juice is my choice over the vinegar dressing, and is more acceptable to more people. If there happen to be a couple of cooked yams or sweet potatoes in the refrigerator, slice thickly lengthwise and heat in the bacon pan with a minimum of fat to serve with the salad for a complete meal.

A firm green (or purple) cabbage head is a good buy at this time of year, for again there is no waste.

Outer leaves may be wilted with hot water and then used for making Cabbage Rolls with a filling of seasoned brown rice or wholewheat bread crumbs.

The rolls may be pan fried and served with canned tomatoes and some of their juice heated in the same pan. They will cook in 15 or 20 minutes.

Grated cabbage is well known as Cold Slaw, cold, but this can be served as Hot Cole Slaw by using the dressing given above for the Chard or Spinach Salad.

Ordinary green cabbage grated fine can be enlivened by adding chopped chives, parsley or chervil, adding pieces of any kind of fruit either raw or canned, grated cheddar cheese; then shake up a dressing by mixing some of the juice (use a little orange juice if no other available) with homemade yogurt, a few grains of salt, and topped with colorful paprika.

With fresh vegetables in spring, anything goes and everyone likes to see something different in wintertime salads.

Steaks in Cream Sauce: Delectable

By PIERRE FRANEY
New York Times

I would be hard put to explain why one of the best and easiest dishes, made with shell steaks or other tender cuts of beef, can be produced using both vinegar and cream. A good cook or chef, without a chemist's training, learns through empirical means what will and will not curdle sauces, what will cause an emulsion and so on.

Today, influenced by la nouvelle cuisine, there are scores of fine dishes that rely on vinegar as a flavoring. Not straight, mind you, but in a highly reduced state. Two of the most successful of the "new" dishes are salmon slices with a mild vinegar sauce and goose or duck livers in a similar sauce.

The recipe printed here for steaks in a cream sauce, lightly seasoned with a trace of reduced vinegar, is simplicity itself and delectable. The steak is seared and cooked briefly in a hot skillet with butter. It is removed, and vinegar is added to the skillet and greatly reduced. Cream, salt and pepper are added and this mixture, too, is reduced almost by half. When the steaks are returned to the sauce and turned in it, finely chopped shallots are added and the steaks are ready for serving.

Mushrooms bordelaise make a perfect accompaniment for this dish: Fresh mushrooms — whole, cut in half or sliced — are cooked in hot oil until brown and crisp. They are drained and finished with the classic bordelaise garniture, bread crumbs, shallots and parsley.

Steak with vinegar sauce

- 1½ pounds boneless, tender steak, fat removed, such as shell steak or filet mignon
- 2 teaspoons paprika
- Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
- ¼ cup red wine vinegar
- 1 cup heavy cream
- 2 tablespoons finely minced shallots

1. If shell steaks are used, leave them whole. If filets, have them cut into eight pieces. Sprinkle the steaks on both sides with paprika, salt and pepper.

2. Heat the butter in a skillet and when it is very hot and almost brown, add the steaks in one layer. Cook about two minutes on one side and turn. Cook about two minutes until golden on the other side. Remove and keep warm.

3. Pour off the fat from the skillet. Add the vinegar, stirring to dissolve the brown particles that cling to the botton and sides of the skillet.

4. Cook until the vinegar is almost evaporated and add the cream. Cook, stirring, over high heat until reduced almost by half. Add any juices that have accumulated around the meat. Add salt and pepper to taste.

5. Return the steaks to the skillet and turn in the sauce.

6. To the sauce add the shallots. Heat briefly, without cooking. Serve.

60-MINUTE GOURMET

Mushrooms Bordelaise

- ¾ pound fresh mushrooms
- ¼ cup peanut, vegetable or corn oil
- Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 1 tablespoon fresh bread crumbs
- 1 tablespoon finely chopped shallots
- 1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley

1. Rinse the mushrooms in cold water and drain well.

2. If the mushrooms are large, slice them or cut them in half. If small, leave them whole or cut in half.

3. In a very heavy skillet, heat the oil.

4. When the oil is hot and almost smoking, add the mushrooms, sat and pepper to taste. Cook over very high heat, shaking the skillet and stirring so that the mushrooms cook evenly, until they are quite brown and crisp. They should be almost mahogany colored.

6. Pour the mushrooms and cooking oil into a sieve to drain.

7. To the skillet add the butter. When melted, add the mushrooms. Sprinkle quickly with bread crumbs, shallots and parsley. Toss and serve.

Pop a Cork For Pork

- 1½ pounds lean pork shoulder or leg
- 1½ pounds hard fat back
- 2 heaped tablespoons salt
- 1 level teaspoon quatre-espices (Available at spice counters in specialty food stores)
- 4 ounces truffle peelings
- 1½ cups (½ bottle) champagne
- 3 eggs
- 1 level teaspoon white pepper
- Butter

Grind the meat finely, two or three times. Mix in all the seasonings, then stir in the champagne gradually. Finally add the truffles. Stuff into casings, or place in a stainless steel or glass bowl and cover. Refrigerate for two days to allow flavors to meld.

Cook cased sausages in butter in a frying pan, or place sausage mixture in two 9-by-5-by-3 bread tins and bake in a 350-degree oven for 1 hour. Drain fat, cut into slices and serve with home-fried potatoes and a green salad. Three to four servings.

Parents Can Help

NEW YORK (AP) — Parents can help young baseball players prevent injuries by making sure that all equipment has passed a safety check and that the child is in good physical condition, says Sparky Anderson, a former professional player who now works with minor league players.

He advises that parents check the webbing on baseball gloves, make sure bats are of the proper weight and size and that shatter-proof lenses be used by those who wear glasses.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the man who seriously injured a boy on a bike struck home with me. (He said he didn't even see the lad until after he hit him since it was dark, the boy was wearing dark clothes and had no lights on his bike.)

Abby, that's exactly what happened to our son — only he was killed instantly.

We live in New Hampshire, and a few years ago they started giving the kids in all the elementary schools packets of reflector buttons (called "Hot Dots"). They're about the size of a quarter, have sticky backs and can be attached to clothing, boots, bikes — anything a child wears or carries. These Hot Dots light up in the dark and make the child visible to motorists.

Every time I see a youngster at night with those reflectors on his clothes and bike, I can't help but think that if my son had had them when he was riding his bike that rainy night, he'd be 22 years old now. — MOM.

DEAR MOM: I checked out the Hot Dot safety program and learned that since Gov. Meldrim Thomson Jr. initiated it in 1974, New Hampshire's child pedestrian death toll has been reduced 40 per cent.

But Hot Dots are not for children only. Adults, especially older folks, should use them on their coats, hats, shoes and umbrellas!

DEAR ABBY: This is in reference to the 12-year-old boy who was struck by a car while riding his bike in the dark without lights.

Twelve years ago Ted did the same thing. Fortunately, he was not hurt, but his bike was badly damaged. The next day, the man who hit him came to the house with his insurance agent — all apologies, offering to repair the damaged bike.

Ted's face lit up, but his mother, who had very strict principles, said "Not a penny will he get! Ted disobeyed my orders by riding his bike at night before he had his lights fixed. He could have been crippled or killed. I will not allow him to be rewarded for disobeying me. The bicycle repairs will come out of his allowance!"

Maybe our insurance rates would go down if we had more people with principles like Ted's mother. — SUSIE.

DEAR SUSIE: And so would our juvenile delinquency rate — which is even more important.

DEAR ABBY: I am 16 and very much in love with a wonderful guy. There is only one thing wrong with him. When he makes a date with me, I can never be sure if he will keep it. He has stood me up about half the time, but when he starts explaining the reasons, I forgive him and we start in again where we left off.

He's a real neat kid, Abby. Is there some way I can get him to quit standing me up? If it weren't for that, he'd be perfect. — KATHY.

DEAR KATHY: That one imperfection is probably the most revealing clue to your boyfriend's character. His word is no good. If a man's word is no good, he is nothing. And a girl who gets herself involved with a guy like that is headed for misery. The word from here is: "lose him."

Ear Perforation Repair Is Possible

By L. L. Coleman, MD

I am 55 and have a long-standing perforation of one eardrum. My hearing is poor in that ear. I would like to know if this perforation can be closed, and if it would restore my hearing — Mrs. J.S.

Prior to the advent of the antibiotics, many children with repeated ear infections were left with a perforation of the eardrum. Scarlet fever and measles also left such perforations in their wake. Almost invariably, a moderate amount of hearing was lost because of the infection and perforation.

One of the characteristics of such perforations is that whenever a person gets a cold, an infection of the ear may flare up and, for a short time, there may be an active discharge from the ear. In other instances, the ear may remain perfectly dry.

During the past 20 years, an operation known as tympanoplasty has been devised. In essence, it is a plastic repair of the eardrum. In many instances, the operation is extremely successful. With it comes a moderate, but not complete, return of hearing.

The operation is a safe one and is highly advantageous in carefully selected patients. It deserves your consideration.

I have recently heard that it is now possible to have the eyes tested for vision with a machine. Is this more accurate than the way it is now being done? Where can I find someone who uses this new instrument? — Mr. N.C.

The traditional method of refraction is done by an eye doctor or by an optometrist. Their training is so excellent that their testing is completely reliable.

In the past few years, a number of automated eye refractors have been created. One is known as the ophthalmetron. The other is the dioptron. These machines function as photoelectric devices. The patient reads the same kind of chart and a print-out shows the error of vision. The instruments are very expensive and have not yet proved their complete accuracy.

At the present time, the data of accuracy are still limited. Until there is complete proof that these instruments are totally reliable, there seems no point in searching for a replacement for the orthodox, dependable techniques that are now available.

Quick Boost From Honey

To reliquify crystallized honey, place jar in a pan of warm water.

Measure honey in a greased cup or spoon or one which has been warmed with hot tap water.

To make cakes, cookies, pancakes and waffles extra moist and flavorful, add 2 tbsp. honey to the batter.

Use honey as a sweetener in coffee, tea, eggnogs, milkshakes and fruit drinks.

Honey can replace up to 1 cup (250 ml) sugar in a recipe. If additional liquid is called for in the recipe, omit ¼ cup (50 ml). Reduce the oven temperature by 25°F. (10 to 15°C) to prevent overbrowning.

For Flat Tummies ... And Fat Wallets

By INA WARREN

MONTREAL (CP) — Bernard de Lamothe designs classy Canadian clothes aimed at the affluent young executive who hasn't let success go to his midriff.

His sleek collection of men's shirts, sweaters, suits, and coats has the high-fashion flair and good taste one expects from a man who once designed for Pierre Balmain of Paris. And the de Lamothe label is in growing demand by top-drawer men's stores from coast-to-coast in Canada and in several American cities.

Last year his fledgling company, Bernard de Lamothe Fashion Inc. of Montreal, registered sales of $1.3 million in Canada, and prospects look even better for year two.

De Lamothe admits the Quebec government's removal of the provincial sales tax on clothing last year — a "temporary" measure which was made permanent in this year's budget — was the key to launching his tiny company.

"We might have got it going, but no sales tax made a tremendous difference. Retailers were hungry last year when they saw our collection at the Men's Wear Canada Show."

At this year's fall trade show in one of Place Bonaventure's giant exhibition halls, his earth-toned tweeds, silks, and mohairs exuded genteel refinement in a sea of blue denim.

Born in Bedford, in Quebec's Eastern Townships, de Lamothe went to work at 18 in a Montreal shirt factory where he did everything — production cutting, inventory, marketing — until he finally got a chance to design.

"It was always in my blood," he says.

After almost 20 years in the Canadian industry, de Lamothe went to Paris, then pioneered Balmain's men's wear collection in North America.

A genial man in his 40s, de Lamothe recalls how he became an entrepreneur:

"I said to myself one day 'If I can do it for Pierre Balmain, I can do it for my own name.' "

Unlike some designers who license their names to several manufacturers, de Lamothe, with a staff of seven, controls his own merchandising, sets his own prices, hand-picks his fabrics and controls his advertising image.

His shirts, which retail between $26 and $90, and his suits are made in Quebec factories, but the designer must travel to Europe and Japan to find yarn-dyed fabrics.

His sweaters, which can sell for up $200, are made in Italy because Canada doesn't have the machinery to produce them. Nevertheless, he says, the workmanship in Quebec's apparel factories is "tremendous."

His predilection is for easy styling, earth-toned colors and textured fabrics in shirts and jackets, but de Lamothe says his collection must also take regional fashion tastes into account.

Nonslip Girdle Her Big Hope

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Ever since the dawn of pantyhose on the "unmentionable" market killed her business, girdle designer Paula Blatt has been scheming to make a comeback.

The 78-year-old woman is attempting to design a girdle that won't slip and slide and can be worn over pantyhose.

"Such a girdle could revitalize businesss that has been lost to the pantyhose," said Mrs. Blatt, holder of 52 patents for her creations — including maternity panties, no-chafe panties and garter belts.

At one time, the acclaimed authority on maternity lingerie and comfort garments, said she was known as "the expectant mother's best friend."

Although she never had children of her own, she studied the discomforts of childbearing and, with the help of doctors who approved her work, designed maternity garments.

But her business, Nu Vogue Creations, has never had it so bad.

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS®
...it tells you how

Now that the last of winter is blowing itself out in various parts of the country . . . can spring housecleaning be far behind?

No! And with prices what they are today, this may well be an ideal spring for sprucing up the place with some of grandma's low-cost "homemade household handies". The following formulas are furnished by the Norfolk County Cooperative Extension Service of Walpole, Massachusetts.

Got windows to wash? Any one of these recipes will make them squeaky clean: Either one tablespoon of ammonia or vinegar to one quart of water . . . or two teaspoons of borax or kerosene in a quart of water . . . or one to two teaspoons of washing soda or trisodium phosphate to one quart of water. (If you're hearty enough to wash windows in freezing weather, add a quarter cup of denatured alcohol to each quart of any of the above solutions.)

To clean an oven, heat the unit to 200°F, turn it off, and place a bowl containing a half cup of ammonia inside. Provide ventilation in the room and let the ammonia stand overnight. Then, in the morning, wash the oven's interior surfaces with hot water and detergent.

And if you want to shine up your furniture with the "latest" lemon-flavored polish, all you have to do is mix together equal parts of lemon juice, denatured alcohol, olive oil, and gum turpentine. Dampen a clean lintless cloth with the solution, apply the polish . . . and then wipe the treated wood with a dry rag.

Children See Hope In Courts

WINNIPEG (CP) — Children sometimes get themselves into law courts in order to get attention for their problems, a Manitoba Association of School Trustees' meeting was told.

April Katz, a director of the Canadian Human Rights Commission, said some children in desperate circumstances regard a court as the only place where they can get a hearing.

She said children are not guaranteed the right to be consulted in custody matters, or the right to refuse to be placed with a child-care agency if their parents request it.

Crime Decline Cuts Need of Prison

WINNIPEG (CP) — A federal corrections official says one reason for dropping government plans to build a maximum security prison at Selkirk, Man., is a projected decline in crime during the next decade.

"The baby boom is passing and the increase in inmates won't be the same it was in the past," said Art Majkut of the Canadian Corrections Service.

"Predictions are that this shift in demographics will cause the crime rate to drop over the next few years."

He said the Selkirk decision was a matter of economics.

Majkut noted many of the 216 cells in the proposed Selkirk penitentiary would have been empty unless inmates were transferred from other provinces.

Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais announced last December it was dropping the Selkirk plans as part of a reduction of $225 million in the federal prison construction program.

Painting Still Puzzle

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary's mystery painting, tentatively valued at $200,000, continues to baffle experts trying to identify its creator — who may be a Florentine artist.

The national galleries in London and Ottawa still do not know who painted it. Calgary's Glenbow Institute is continuing its search and 100 other qualified art experts who have seen in the last three months are still stumped.

Art dealer Terry Trainer bought the painting for $95 at a Calgary auction two years ago. Last year he learned it was an original work of art, possibly painted by a Florentine master, after a paint chip carbon-dating test revealed it was about 400 years old.

Experts in Ottawa have ruled out speculation that it is the work of one of the great Italian masters, but say it might be the work of a minor master.

Trainer said he is tired of taking the painting from its storage spot in a bank vault to his art store and back each day but doesn't plan to give up the search.

But he has put the painting up for sale for $20,000, which he says is the minimum it should bring.

Spring Brings a Bad Taste

RED DEER (CP) — The ducks haven't made their annual return to Red Deer yet, but the bad taste in the drinking water has.

City engineer Bryon Jeffers said the off-taste occurs each year during spring runoff as foreign matter is carried into the Red Deer River.

Most of the taste comes from the extra chemicals used to treat the water, he said in an interview. The city was using about 500 pounds of chlorine daily.

Hospital, Care Home Approved

WINNIPEG (CP) — The province has approved final details for a new hospital at Snow Lake in northern Manitoba and a new personal care home for north Winnipeg, Health Minister Bud Sherman has announced. The Snow Lake hospital, to be built at a cost of $945,000, will also include space for doctor's offices, public health offices, laboratory and x-ray services and dental facilities. The 100-bed personal care home is scheduled for completion in about a year at a cost of $3 million.

French Immersion Approved

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — A $16.3-million 1979 operating budget featuring a French immersion program has been approved by the public school board. The balanced budget calls for taxpayers to provide more local support — $5.1 million or 32 per cent of the budget. Local support was $3.9 in a 1978 budget of $14.5 million. The school budget increase means 7.98 mills on the tax bill, almost equalling the 8.1 mills the city has set for its purposes. Ramsey Vickers, city finance director, said that on an assessment of $30,000 taxpayers face a tax of $243 for municipal services and $239 for public school purposes.

Gaming Laws Ease Sought

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — City council will ask the provincial attorney-general to suspend policies forbidding service clubs to sponsor adult sports teams using gaming revenues. Aldermen voted 5-3 in favor of asking for the suspension of the policy, which they believe will cause about a dozen local teams to lose their sponsorships. Numerous teams are sponsored by groups such as the Labor Club, which earns revenue through the sale of pull-type lottery tickets, considered a form of gambling by provincial officials. The pull-type tickets are marked with slot-machine symbols. The buyer pulls a tab out of the book to see whether or not he has won. New policies went into effect in February which forbid use of such revenue for sports teams with members more than 21 years of age.

Council Faces Lean Paydays

LA RONGE, Sask. (CP) — "The days of wine and roses are over" for the Northern Municipal Council, chairman Gordon Carle has warned.

The five council members face self-imposed reductions in salaries that now range from $15,000 to $17,000 a year plus expenses. They drew their last fat paycheques last week.

From now on, they will be paid on a per diem basis, which means that if they don't attend meetings they will not get paid for those meetings.

The change will reduce councillors' salaries to about $8,000 a year. Carle said this will force at least three of them, including himself, to go back to their previous commercial fishing and trapping activities.

Carle said he des not see the movement back to part-time jobs as detrimental to the over-all quality of service provided by the council.

"When you get back to doing what the people you represent are doing for a living, it might improve your service as a councillor. It brings us back to reality."

The councillors will also give up trucks and credit cards paid for by department of northern Saskatchewan funds allocated for the council's budget. Each of the five councillors had a truck and a gasoline credit card provided to them by the council.

Four of the five trucks will be sold and the remaining truck will be retained for sole use by a full-time reeve who will hopefully be elected in October.

Carle said councillors will use their own vehicles for council business. They will be paid a rate of 21 cents a mile.

"The main thing is try and live within our budget ($252,000 for 1978-79). We don't know how much we will save but it will be quite a lot."

Plant Purchased

WINNIPEG (CP) — Red River Co-Operative Ltd. of Winnipeg has purchased for an undisclosed sum the old plant formerly operated by Uncle Ben's Breweries (Manitoba) Ltd. in the Transcona district.

Camp Pitched on Polar Ice

The mission, code named Operation Lorex, will study the Arctic seafloor and hopefully unravel the secrets of its formation. The undertaking, operated by the energy, mines and resources department, is the largest Canadian exploration of the North Pole.

The scientists are pitting their skills against one of the world's harshest climates and some of its most baffling mysteries.

The camp, huddled around a Canadian flag, is surrounded by an unforgiving world of ice. There is no land, only a light covering of snow over sea ice up to 45 metres thick. Almost any life form is alien.

Man survives only with modern technology.

There are dangers — minus 40 Celsius spring-time temperatures and 100-kilometre-an-hour winds which often scream across the frozen wasteland.

The Lorex camp has been established by a small expeditionary team preparing for a larger group expected later this week. Scientific work is a week or more away.

Canadian Forces Hercules aircraft dropped up to three loads of supplies on the ice each day. Each load weighed about 14,000 kilograms (31,000 pounds) and each had to be cleared from the drop zone before the next arrived.

When not unloading and caching supplies, the expeditionary team had to erect the buildings needed to house 17 men waiting in Resolute.

The task became a strength-sapping cycle. Time became meaningless. Meals were eaten on a catch-as-catch-can basis. Men fell asleep fully dressed in their cots, too tired to get into heavy, down-filled sleeping bags.

Waiting 950 metres under the ice is the Lomonosov Ridge, the focus of the two-month-long mission.

Nothing Smart In New Car

EDMONTON (CP) — The president of the Automotive Protection Association said Tuesday buying a new car is never a smart move.

"All you ever buy with a new car is 50-per-cent depreciation in the first two years plus a lot of grief if it is a real lemon," said Phil Edmunston of Montreal.

The head of the 6,000-member non-profit consumers' group was here to promote his latest book, Lemon-Aid '79. The book contains a list of the best and the worst cars in the last nine years and some advice on how to buy a car.

"It all boils down to the fact that it's really a better idea to buy a year-old second-hand car, because you can have it checked out mechanically before buying it and pay a lot less for it than a new one."

A customer who is convinced his car is a lemon, or that the dealer's repair work has been shoddy, should pay his service bill "under protest" and then go to small claims court, Edmunston said.

Allmand Thought Breakins Legal

OTTAWA (CP) — Former solicitor-general Warren Allmand testified Tuesday that he thought RCMP "intelligence probes," which involved breaking into homes and offices without warrant, were being carried out legally.

Allmand, testifying before a royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing, also characterized as "absolutely false" retired RCMP commissioner W. L. Higgitt's contention that he told Allmand the RCMP were opening mail and doing other things illegally.

Allmand was the first high-level witness not to invoke protection of the Canada Evidence Act while answering questions.

Evidence placed before the inquiry indicated that Allmand was prepared to give a bland reply in the Commons if anyone asked about Operation 300, the code name for "intelligence probes," which were known by Mounties as "fishing expeditions" and which apparently were carried out by the hundreds in the 1970s.

The reply was prepared for Allmand by an aide, Georges Vincent, after Operation 300 was mentioned October, 1974, in an article in the Montreal daily newspaper Le Devoir.

The article was about a treatise by Guy Tardif, then a University of Montreal professor. Commission lawyers said that the same Tardif, a former Mountie, now is minister of municipal affairs in the Parti Quebecois government.

Vincent informed Allmand that the RCMP said that Operation 300 "touches upon a very sensitive topic." The suggested reply Allmand was to give if the matter came up in the Commons was: "I am aware of the article and am examining it."

Allmand said the question wasn't asked and the card containing the answer was probably removed from his file eventually. He said he would have followed it up if a question had been asked or newspaper had picked it up.

"I take it this is not a case where you asked one of your own back-benchers to ask a question?" royal commissioner Donald Rickerd of Toronto said to Allmand.

That sent a chuckle through the room. Cabinet ministers sometimes ask back-benchers from their own party to ask Commons questions, but only if the reply will cast the government in a good light.

"You were aware of that kind of operation (300) before you left office?" commission counsel W. A. Kelly of Toronto asked Allmand.

"Not under that name," Allmand replied.

However, he told Kelly he had known the RCMP entered homes and offices without warrant to seek physical and documentary evidence. But he said he thought this was legal.

"What gave you that impression?" Kelly asked.

"The RCMP," Allmand replied.

Mr. Justice David C. McDonald's eyebrows rose at this. McDonald, the commission chairman, was told a year ago by senior RCMP officers that the main concern in "intelligence probes" was that a Mountie would be charged with breaking and entering.

"I knew they had to do that from time to time," Allmand said of the investigations. "As far as I am concerned, it was done legally."

He said he never asked for a legal opinion because "no case of that kind was ever brought to my attention."

Allmand said the investigations were different from Operation Bricole, in which the RCMP carted away documents after breaking into the offices of a left-wing news agency in Montreal in 1972, because property was taken or destroyed. RCMP Chief Supt. Donald Cobb, who authorized Bricole, pleaded guilty in 1977 to authorizing a raid without warrant and was given an unconditional discharge by Montreal Judge Rober Vincent, who said Cobb's motives had been noble.

Asked whether he would have approved Operation Ham, in which the RCMP carted away Parti Quebecois membership lists in 1973 to copy them, Allmand replied that he would have checked the legality of that operation first. (RCMP picked locks, disconnected a burglar alarm, then took, copied and returned party membership tapes between midnight and dawn.)

"We must always act within the law."

Braking Of Rabbits Watched

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal transport department is keeping a close watch on Volkswagens after a U.S. safety group announced it is investigating a suspected safety defect in the braking system of more than 400,000 of the automobiles.

Jim Bancroft, chief of motor vehicle investigations, said Tuesday he has received two reports of failure of the brake master cylinders in 1975 Rabbits. No injuries or accidents had been reported.

The U.S. National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said last week it has received 30 owner complaints about faulty seals in the master cylinders. Two accidents and one injury had occurred.

The administration is looking at 1975 and 1976 Rabbits and Siroccos and 1974, 1975 and 1976 Audi Foxes and Dashers.

Bancroft said the situation in Canada does not appear to be as widespread as in the States.

Surgeon Cut for $70,000 Plus

TORONTO (CP) — A nurse deserted four years ago by her husband, a $60,000-a-year surgeon, has been awarded half of the family's $141,000 property assets and a lump-sum payment of $20,000.

Mr. Justice Donald Steele of the Ontario Supreme Court also awarded Shirley June McIntyre support of $17,500 a year from her former husband so she will not have to continue working the night shift at a geriatric hospital.

In a written decision released last week, Steele granted the Uxbridge, Ont., woman a divorce on the grounds of cruelty from John Addison McIntyre, who now practises general surgery in Quesnel.

Steele said Mrs. McIntyre was entitled to the lump-sum payment because she worked unpaid as her former husband's office nurse for five years in his practice in the Uxbridge area, about 30 kilometres northwest of Oshawa.

He also ordered the surgeon to pay his former wife $1,000 yearly support for their daughter for as long as she remains away from home at university and $2,400 a year for each of their teen-age sons until they enter university, at which time the amount will be raised to $4,000.

Ontario's year-old Family Law Reform Act entitles the McIntyres to share equally the proceeds from their $92,000 family home, which was in the names of both, and from land worth $49,000, which was in Mrs. McIntyre's name alone, Steele said.

Argentina Eyes 4 More Candus

OTTAWA (CP) — Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. (AECL) will seek to sell four more Candu nuclear reactors and other nuclear equipment to Argentina at an estimated cost of at least $1.8 billion, it was announced Tuesday.

Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said in a news release the cabinet has approved the AECL bid. He added it is hoped prospects will be enhanced by AECL's previous sale to Argentina of a 600 megawatt Candu reactor, now under construction.

Sale of that reactor resulted in a scandal that rocked Parliament three years ago. And Conservatives and New Democrats both questioned the sale of nuclear material to governments they said were unstable.

An AECL spokesman said a successful bid could result in 15,000 man years of work in the high technology nuclear industry in Canada.

A technical bid was submitted to the Crown corporation's Argentinian counterpart Monday and a second commercial bid is to be completed by April 16.

AECL's competition will come from West Germany which is trying to market a newly-developed 600 megawatt heavy water reactor that has not yet been built.

A decision on the project is months down the road the spokesman said, adding that the sale of Candu reactors to Argentina, Pakistan, India, South Korea and Romania will give Canada a competitive boost.

Gillespie said any proposed sale would be subject to stringent nuclear proliferation safeguards and approval of the governments of both countries.

A political controversy erupted in 1976 when AECL's to agents acting on its behalf in Argentina and South Korea were questioned by the auditor-general.

The agency also had to re-negotiate the cost of the reactor to Argentina because of sky-rocketing inflation in the South American country and still ended up losing millions of dollars.

Scott's World

There's More in Life than Money for Kay Lenz

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

Kay is trying to balance a movie career with television by ignoring the blandishments of producers of situation comedy shows.

Cindy Williams and Penny Marshall earn in the (wealthy) neighborhood of $30,000 a week for their stints in Laverne and Shirley. The Charlie's Angels trio do just as well in their hour-long adventure series.

Kay has made eight feature films, including Misty with Clint Eastwood, and several television movies. The closest she's come to a series was a starring role in Rich Man, Poor Man, Book II, a miniseries.

Still in her 20s, blonde and bright, Kay regularly turned down offers of $25,000 weekly — to start — in a regular series with clauses that could bring her as much as $40,000 after five or six years on the air.

To fight the temptation she has instructed her agent not to accept scripts or contractual offers involving series of any kind.

"It's a bit too tempting," Kay said. "They throw in 30-foot motor homes, color TV sets, Gucci luggage and a lot of extra little goodies.

"The money would be nice. I'd like to earn that sort of salary on a weekly basis. But, if I want to continue making movies and TV films, then I can't afford to get involved in a series.

"Other considerations aside, I don't know if I have the physical stamina to do a weekly show. On top of that I'd be bored to death doing the same character on the same sets month after month with those long working hours.

"My manager assures me a series would give me clout. Maybe so, but viewers won't pay money at the box office to see you if they've become accustomed to seeing you at home for free.

"I don't want to have a five-year career in a hit series and then not work again. I did a TV movie with Mildred Dunnock who was about 80 years old. She was still fresh and lively and happy with her career. And that's what I want to do — work until I'm 80."

Kay said the economic security of her two-year marriage to Cassidy has nothing to do with her decision not to work in a weekly series. She made up her mind a long time ago to hold out for films.

PWA Lawsuit Decision In California April 9

CALGARY (CP) — Canadian claimants in last year's Pacific Western Airlines crash at Cranbrook, that killed 42, will have to wait until April 9 to learn the outcome of attempts to have their cases heard in California courts.

A partner in the office of San Francisco lawyer Jerry Sterns, acting on behalf of 19 Canadians, said a federal court judge in Los Angeles deferred a decision Monday on reversal of a superior court ruling that barred Canadians from seeking damages in the state.

Sterns says the ruling did not consider California's products liability law.

He says the law states: "Where a product is produced in this state . . . and causes injury or death anywhere in the world, it is the policy . . . to deter negligent and wrongful conduct by accepting suits against the designers and manufacturers."

Boeing aircraft of Seattle, Rohr Industries of San Diego and McDonnell-Douglas of Los Angeles were implicated in the crash for their part in the design and construction of an allegedly faulty thrust reverser system.

PO Brass Guessed Wrong on Strike

OTTAWA (CP) — Post office executives told the government last October that the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) would not be able to muster enough support from members to maintain "a full-blown strike," James Corkery, deputy postmaster-general, said Tuesday.

The union proved the assessment wrong by calling a national strike Oct. 16 and continuing that strike even after Parliament ordered postal workers back to their jobs.

Corkery, testifying at the Ontario Supreme Court trial of CUPW president Jean-Claude Parrot, said the post office set up an "information control centre" to assess the mood of the membership and study the possibility of a strike.

Based on information gathered by the control centre, Corkery said he advised Postmaster-General Gilles Lamontagne in early October that while a strike appeared likely, "it would not stay up, it would not last long because the membership would not support it."

But by Oct. 17, post office executives realized "that the solidarity was there and that it was going to continue."

Parliament introduced the back-to-work bill Oct. 17 and it became law Oct. 19. Parrot and other union executives are charged with defying an Act of Parliament.

Under questioning from defence lawyer Leonard Shore, Corkery acknowledged that the post office bargaining strategy is influenced to some extent by its assessment of the strength of the membership.

Earlier Tuesday, Mr. Justice Gregory Evans rejected a defence bid to have the criminal charges against Parrot thrown out on technical legal grounds and he started hearing testimony.

Before the trial started, Parrot was ordered to remove union sympathy buttons from his jacket. They read, in English and French, The Postal Workers Struggle Continues.

Crown lawyer Douglas Rutherford told the jury that Parrot violated Parliament's back-to-work order by failing to direct an end to the national strike.

He introduced stacks of union news releases and telegrams as evidence.

RCMP Sgt. Roy Smith told the court he led a search of the union office in Toroto Oct. 25 and arrested Parrot in Ottawa Oct. 26.

When Shore asked if the police used a paddy wagon to transport Parrot from the RCMP office to he courthouse on Oct. 26, Smith said "it was a van-type vehicle."

Were there bars on the windows? asked Shore.

"To tell you the honest truth I don't know," Smith said. "I haven't examined them that closely. I have never been inside one."

Corkery's answers to Shore's questions indicated the governent took a different approach to its two major unions.

CMHC Loans Up

OTTAWA (CP) — Down payments on homes financed by the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. have been lowered and the maximum loan available raised to $70,000, the federal agency announced today.

The corporation, which guarantees mortgages to assist home-buyers, said the ceiling on loans was raised to reflect changes in market conditions.

The changes are effective immediately, it said.

Under the the National Housing Act, applicants may receive corporation guarantees on loans from banks and mortgage companies. The changes will also allow for up to 95 per cent financing on the first $50,000 loan and 75 per cent of the remainder up to a maximum loan of $70,000.

Down payments on a $60,000 home in Ottawa, Halifax or Prince George will drop to $5,000 from $8,750 and to $7,500 from $17,000 on a $70,000 Toronto, Vancouver or Calgary home, the statement said.

Weston's Bay Bid to be Probed

TORONTO (CP) — The federal consumer affairs department will investigate a bid by George Weston Ltd. of Toronto to take control of Hudson's Bay Co. of Winnipeg, a department spokesman said Tuesday.

George Orr, director of services for the department's combines branch, said the investigation will begin immediatly.

The 54,000-member Canadian Federation of Independent Business filed an application for the inquiry on Tuesday under the Combines Investigation Act.

Both Weston and the Thomson family have made offers for control of the Bay. While Weston offered $40 a share for 51 per cent of the company, the Thomson family offered $35 for 60 per cent.

The federation said it was particularly concerned with the Weston offer and the effect it would have on smaller competitors and suppliers of the Bay.

Federation president John Bulloch said the recent rash of takeovers in the department store field, including the acquisition of Zellers and Simpsons Ltd. by the Bay, "has increased the amount of concentration in this market to a point where a few companies have a virtual stranglehold on Canada's department store sales."

Bulloch said Weston's control of the Bay would discourage smaller firms from competing in the market.

In shopping centres, where anchor stores "already exercise an inordinate amount of control . . . in terms of rents, product lines, prices," and competing firms, the reduction in competition would be particularly evident, Bulloch said.

A further development in the struggle for control of the Bay came Tuesday night when the Ontario Securities Commission granted the Thomson group an extension on the closing date for its share offer.

After a two-hour hearing and extended meetings with Thomson and Weston representatives, the commission extended the closing date from Monday to Thursday of next week.

Thomson recently increased its bid from $31 to $35 a share bid for 60 per cent of the Bay in what it called a variation of its original offer.

Weston announced Tuesday that it will proceed with its original offer of $40 a share. It would not be obligated to take any Bay stock unless its offer attracted at least 51 per cent of the Bay's 23 million shares.

Communists Plan On Fielding 75

WINNIPEG (CP) — Party leader William Kashtan said Tuesday the Communist Party of Canada is focussing on economic issues in the current federal election campaign.

He said Canada should be freed from control of multinational corporations and should nationalize vital industries, such as energy and natural resources.

"Energy should be owned by the people of Canada and any profit made should be passed on to the Canadian people in the form of lower prices," Kashtan said.

Kashtan told a news conference the party plans to field 75 candidates, 20 of them in Quebec. He said he will again be running in the Toronto riding of Trinity.

"We just want people to judge our views," said Kashtan, who was accompanied at the news conference by three candidates the party is running in Winnipeg ridings.

He said the party has about $130,000 for the election, of which $55,000 will be to orchestrate the central campaign. The balance will be for individual constituencies.

Tory's Selection Illegal? In Ont.

GERALDTON, Ont. (CP) — An executive member of the Progressive Conservative association for the federal riding of Cochrane said Tuesday an announcement will be made today on whether Carole Kosowan's nomination as the party's candidate will stand.

Carl Haavaldsrud said the announcement will put an end to the controversy over whether the nomination of the 22-year-old Miss Kosowan was legitimate.

Miss Kosowan defeated Ralph Stewart, a former Liberal who crossed the floor last month to join the Conservatives, at nomination meetings held last weekend.

But Robert Coates, national president of the party, asked the riding executive Monday to meet and consider the legality of the nomination.

Coates said he agreed with complaints of Arthur Malcolm, president of the party's association in Geraldton, that votes were cast at the nomination by individuals not entitled to do so under the association's consitution.

The constitution states that in addition to members of the association executive and party candidates in the last federal and provincial elections, only one delegate from each polling subdivision in the riding may cast a ballot for the nomination.

Malcolm said party officials had permitted all association members to vote but decided after the vote was counted that this was unconsitutional.

Meanwhile, Miss Kosowan, who beat Stewart for the nomination by a vote of 285-181, is on the campaign trail.

How Does Clark Like his Eggs?

OTTAWA (CP) — You are a Progressive Conservative organizer and Joe Clark is coming to town campaigning. How do you prepare? Where do you put him up? What do you feed him?

Well, if he's making speeches, you have to find "full box podiums that are mid-chest height." That, say confidential party campaign documents, is what he likes to speak behind.

He is a light sleeper, the documents say.

That means you have to put him in a room "away from noisy streets."

Meals? The papers say Clark's tastes vary, but "it is usually safe when pre-ordered meals are required to use the following guidelines:

Breakfast - orange juice, bacon, toast, coffee and two eggs "hard yolk and over." Lunch - sandwiches (westerns, clubs etc.), salad, milk or coke. Dinner - French fries, salad, filet mignon (well done) milk or coke again.

Clark drinks sparingly, but when he does he likes Dubonnet or imported beer.

The information is contained in a black, looseleaf binder about a quarter of an inch thick that also contains itineraries, background notes, and profiles of those the Conservative leader will meet at his stops.

"He does not like to be overly protected from people and his image of accessibility reflects his nature."

The papers describe Clark's stamina as "good."

But they add that he needs his rest.

"This means at least nine hours of down time each night.

"As a rule, three to four tour events should be the limit each day."

"It is not designed for Joe Clark to do the job of local candidates."

The papers describe the press as "our toughest critics," and warn organizers that "there will be at least 30 of them (reporters) descending on you at every stop."

Reporters "expect things to operate smoothly."

"When they don't, the press will write about them in a way that reflects on the leader of the party."

Clark Ducks Unity, Stays on Economy

By JIM ROBB
Times Ottawa Bureau

But the Conservative leader did not rise to the bait. He devoted few words to national unity, then launched into his standard text on the economy in a luncheon address to the chamber members.

A Conservative government will aim to get the rate of economic growth up to an annual average rate of 5.25 per cent between 1980 and 1985.

The growth rate is now less than four per cent and was only 3.5 per cent last year and 2.7 per cent in 1977.

Clark also pledged to reduce the unemployment rate to 5.5 per cent or less by 1985.

Recalling that the rate of unemployment in 1968 when Prime Minister Trudeau toou office was 5.6 per cent Clark noted that it was 10.9 per cet last year. He reminded his audience that the number of Quebec unemployed had climbed from 124,000 to 307,000 in the decade.

The Conservative leader said that a government led by him would aim for a minimum annual productivity increase of 2.25 per cent.

He said one of the main causes of slow economic growth in the last two years was a attributable to productivity increase averaging only one per cent a year.

A fourth Conservative goal is to lower the rate of inflation now at nine per cent to five per cent or less by 1985, Clark said.

Railwest in Squamish Re-opens

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Railway said Tuesday it is re-opening the Railwest railcar plant in Squamish as part of a major improvement program for the provincially-owned railway.

Mac Norris, BCR president, said the former manufacturing plant will serve as a heavy car equipment repair centre.

The president also announced the railway will build a repair shop and stores centre totalling $4.5 million in Prince George.

The plant was closed in August, 1977, and about 260 workers were laid off after the provincial government complained it could not compete with eastern Canadian railcar manufacturers.

Norris said estimates of needed car repairs show the facilities at Squamish, about 80 kilometres northwest of Vancouver, will not be able to handle the demand.

He said transferring all repairs to the Squamish plant will be more efficent and that the mechanical repair department will be able to handle unscheduled repair jobs.

It is expected the cost of relocation will be offset by the sale of surplus machinery and equipment from Railwest's plant.

A company spokesman said it is not known how many jobs will be created by the Squamish renovation, or how much it would cost.

Idea Rejected

LONDON (AP) — Foreign Secretary David Owen curtly dismissed a suggestion from a Labor MP that the government take over an estate in Surrey owned by Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and turn it into a hospital or institution.

Patrol Vessel Ordered

OTTAWA (CP) — A $6.6 million contract has been awarded to a Vancouver shipyard for the construction of a new 36-metre fisheries patrol vessel for use on the West Coast.

The John Manly Shipyard will construct the vessel, which will replace the patrol ship Howay.

The new vessel will have a 20-man crew and will be powered by two 2,300 bhp diesel engines giving a top speed of approximately 20 knots.

Completion date has been set for late 1981.

Vandals Slash B.C. Tel Cables

VANCOUVER (UPC) — More than one thousand telephone subscribers had their telephone service disconnected Tuesday in three separate acts of vandalism, B.C. Tel reported.

"All three cables appeared to be slashed by someone wielding an axe," said B.C.Tel spokesmen Graham Stewart, "or let's say at this point the cuts look very similar."

Two cables consisting of 900 separate pairs of wires were discovered in downtown alleys after service to bank alarms and offices was disrupted. A smaller cable was discovered later in the day, and service was restored by late afternoon.

Stewart said all the cut cables were on poles and accessable to anyone willing to climb.

Employers Urge Code Changes

The Employers Council of B.C. has recommended the Labor Code be amended in three areas — strikes and picketing, decertification and the definition of employee.

In a brief to the provincial government, the council says although the employee definition was changed in 1977, the Labor Relations Board ruled in a later decision that the amendments did not amount to a change in policy.

The employers council wants to further amend the definition to spell out a policy change expanding the scope of managerial exclusions from the code.

If a person is not deemed to be an employee under the code's definition then he or she would be part of management and therefore beyond the jurisdiction of any union.

The council wants to exclude anyone who exercises "management functions in the direction of, or control over, employees of the employer which includes the supervision of employees of the employer."

Also excluded would be anyone employed in a confidential capacity in matters related to labor relations or personnel or "who ordinarily has access to such confidential matters in the course of his or her employment or whose employment involves duties which by virtue of union membership place an individual in a position of conflict of interest."

"It is not our intention to unduly restrain or confine the rights of individuals to be represented by a trade union if they so wish."

"However, we feel anyone who exercises management functions, including first-line supervisors, should be excluded from the definition of employee."

On the matter of strikes and picketing, the council recommends the code be amended to ensure that companies which, during a strike, merely attempt to continue a business relationship with the struck company are not subject to secondary picketing.

This protection would not be given to those businesses which deliberately undertake to assist an employer in resisting a strike, the council says.

On the decertification issue, the council wants the same requirements for the certification of a union as bargaining agent to be applied in the case where employees want to be decertified.

Gifted Student Program Dropped

"It's a futile waste of board money and teacher energy to try to keep it going," Dr. Martin Levin said of the International Baccalaureate program which was to be tried at Esquimalt High.

His main criticism was that the pilot program would have offered only a portion of the full IB program developed in Switzerland and implemented in such institutions as Lester Pearson College.

Levin said he had doubts about a program developed in Switzerland and "plunked down in this district" in truncated form.

Trustees voted 5-4 to drop the plan, but Greater Victoria School District has applied for participation in a new ministry of education project for gifted students also aiming at a September start.

LOOKING FOR A STATION WAGON COME LOOK AT ME
I was born in Detroit 3 yrs ago. They named me Caprice Estate. I can carry 9 people and was equipped to tow other living quarters. I am cool in the summer and warm in the winter. My windows and door locks work by themselves. I have cruise control for those long trips and I'm immaculate and really fit. I've turned over 59,000 miles but all well cared for. Come down and drive me. I'm a real delight.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale, start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

Did Nessie Swim For TV Camera?

Evidence at last of the monster that legend has lurking in depths of Britain's deepest lake? Not so, says the British Broadcasting Corporation.

Nevertheless, it is submitting film of the black speck on the lake for analysis by the photographic laboratories of the Royal Air Force to try to determine what it was.

The film by veteran cameraman Peter Leddy was given a nationwide screening Tuesday. It shed little light on whether there is a Loch Ness monster — known as "Nessie" — and the BBC concluded, "All we can say for sure is that the mystery of the monster is far from solved."

The sighting was made Monday as Leddy, his wife, and a BBC reporter drove along the shore of Loch Ness on another assignment.

Leddy's eye was caught by the object's V-shaped wash about 1 mile south of the ruins of Urquhart Castle and in the area of reported — but not substantiated — past sightings of the monster.

"In all the years I've been driving past the loch, I've never seen anything until today, although I always load up my cameras before driving past that way," Leddy said.

His film showed a small speck "about the size of a football" zigzagging back and forth on the surface for about 10 minutes.

"It could just have been a seal or an otter," Leddy said.

Conditions were ideal. The afternoon was still and clear and there was scarcely a ripple on the water.

The sighting rekindled interest in the legend of the Loch Ness monster that has attracted serious scientific interest in recent years.

After an electronic expedition that showed possible signs of large unidentified bodies moving through the 900-foot depths, Dr. Robert Rines of the Boston-based Academy of Applied Science last month announced plans to use porpoises with cameras strapped to their backs to locate them.

At least 1,000 sightings of the "monster," resembling a giant horned sea serpent, have been reported since the 1930s.

Freedom of Growth In Smaller Gardens

GARDENING
hilda beastall

Pruning of flowering shrubs which lose their leaves in fall is an artificial means devised by professional gardeners of the 19th century to bring them to the point of giving the effects desired.

Gardens were large but labor was cheap. Big landowners took advantage of the situation to have their grounds massed with color through the growing seasons.

Shrubs of one kind were frequently grown in large groups together so that no space existed either at ground level or between the branches above. The outline of a shrub was not considered.

This form of intensive gardening demanded pruning of the shrubs to produce new growth in abundance with no regard to the normal habit of mature growth.

In this century with its living conditions and higher wages, there has been some change to more freedom of growth in smaller gardens. Take spring blooming golden forsythia as an example. Growing in soil containing plentiful humus to supply moisture from monthly deep waterings in our dry May-to-September seasons, without pruning forsythia exhibits its tendency to grow up to 10 feet with loose arching branches.

If desirable, the owner may, from then on, do no more pruning. There will be fewer flowers per square foot but the over-all picture becomes a mass of gold from just one shrub, but most of it will be above eye level.

To get a well-developed plant from a newly-purchased slender shrub in spring, it is desirable to prune each April immediately after the show of golden bloom is finished. Pruning we know encourages more growth and the smaller the shrub the more important it is to prune. The new growth will be produced during the summer.

Notice that forsythia flowers appear along the top half of each stem. It is this portion of each stem that is cut off as the flowers fade.

Below where the cut is made will be seen signs of new growth; we call them dormant growth buds. Pruning away the old flowered portions allows all the food in the rising sap to go to these new growths.

During summer, if kept regularly watered at the roots, the shrub will develop three to five new shoots which bloom the year after next.

This indicates that no pruning is to be done on branches not flowering this spring, for these will grow longer this summer and bloom next spring. Nor should pruning be done at any other time of year.

Neglected old forsythia can be reconditioned by pruning now. Obviously dead wood should be cut out first. Then remaining shoots which bear a few flowers should be cut off as described above.

But remember that pruning alone will not do the job. If the soil is worn out it must be loosened on the surface, then top dressed with new soil from the compost heap mixed with old manure or other form of humus material. Regular deep watering on a monthly basis during summer will gradually improve growing conditions.

In extreme cases of neglect it may take two to three years before the forsythia can be considered as reclaimed.

This is a case where pruning has its definite use in today's gardening. When re-established, the forsythia may again go unpruned if a looser, taller shrub is wanted.

Opening lead — two of hearts.

Let's assume you're in three notrump and West leads the deuce of hearts. You play dummy's jack, hoping West led from the K-Q, but East produces the king and you duck. East returns the heart three and you play low again. West wins with the ten and leads a third heart, forcing out your ace.

You have been looking at eight sure tricks right from the start, and the ninth trick did not seem hard to get. But when you play a low diamond to the queen and another diamond back to the ace, West discards a spade — and making the contract now hangs uncertainly in the balance.

The outcome obviously depends on making four club tricks, so you lead a club to the ace, another club back to the king, and then your last club, on which West plays the nine.

Now comes the moment of truth. If West has the jack, you should play dummy's ten; if East has the jack, you should play dummy's queen. Decisions of this kind are seldom a toss-up; there is practically always a reason for favoring one play over the other. This case is no exception; there is a good clue to lean on.

It all goes back to West's opening lead of the deuce of hearts. There is a strong presumption that West would have led from a five-card suit, if he had one, rather than a four-card suit. His lead of the heart deuce indicated he had four of them, and this was confirmed by East's return of the three, showing that he also had four hearts.

Once it is conceded that West does not have a five-card suit, it follows that his original distribution was necessarily 4-4-1-4 (since he showed out on the second diamond lead). Finessing the ten of clubs therefore becomes the right play.

Not Sweetie but Dear old Thing

LONDON (CP) — In North American the word for the English lady would be "cool."

She can be counted on to maintain a stiff upper lip in crisis, such as having the elastic snap in her knickers while shopping in Fortnum and Mason's, the smart London department store.

Should she be bucked from her hunter into the village pond, she can be seen to enter the water gracefully, then stroke strongly for shore.

Douglas Sutherland, whose book, The English Gentleman, was all about preferring dogs to mistresses, has penned a sequel called The English Gentleman's Wife.

English ladies, he avows, are almost indecently energetic. No matter what the weather, they gird themselves in deerstalker hats or headscarves, parkas and wellington gumboots, and drag everyone off on a five-mile hike.

"The result is that most ladies, as the years advance, develop complexions of deepsea fishermen with a taste for the bottle."

The gentleman never calls his wife by such pleasantries as "sweetie."

He, when especially fond, refers to her as "dear old thing," an expression of deep affection she probably shares with his favorite retriever and the aged mare on which he learned to ride.

A lady, of course, does not go on about her love life. She considers "with some justice" that such matters as "whether her various animals are on heat to be a subject of much more general interests."

Ladies always mend their own underwear and they do not send such garments to the laundry but have it hand-washed at home either by a trusted maid or even themselves.

"I am reliably informed that one exception to this rule is the Queen who, when in town, has her smalls sent to a very smart establishment not a stone's throw from Buckingham Palace," he writes.

Nannies, whose typically English children's nurses, come in for a bad time. Sutherland recalls that his was inclined to turn on the gas fire without lighting it whenever she wished him to nod off.

"It was only when my mother paid a surprise visit to the nursery, smoking, as was her custom, a small cheroot, that there was a blinding flash and she realized the full duplicity of our attendant."

Egypt-Israel Phone Hotline Set

JERUSALEM (Reuter) — A hotline telephone link will be opened from today between Prime Minister Menachem Begin in Jerusalem and President Anwar Sadat in Cairo, the Israeli leader told parliament.

Begin was reporting to the Knesset on his visit to Cairo in connection with the the new Israel-Egypt peace treaty. The visit ended Tuesday.

Begin confirmed what he told reporters in Cairo Tuesday — that Israel will hand back to Egypt on May 26 the town of El Arish, capital of the Sinai desert border region.

The following day Begin will visit El Arish and make a joint statement with Sadat on opening borders that have been closed between the two countries by 30 years of war.

Begin said the announcement will concern two main points. First is the opening of a direct air corridor between Israel and Egypt.

"More important," he said, "will be the opening of the border between Egypt and Israel for the free flow of civilian traffic from Israel to Egypt on a reciprocal basis."

Begin also said there will be an adjustment in the agreed boundary line running from El Arish in the north to Ras Mohammed in the south. This is the interim withdrawal line which, under the treaty, must be established by next December.

Begin confirmed that an exchange of ratification instruments will be concluded next week and that a month later Israel and Egyptian committees will meet to discuss the autonomy for the Palestinians of Gaza and the West Bank of the Jordan.

He said these problems will be difficult and that differences will arise between Israel and Egypt. "But these will be overcome," he said.

The committees, as announced in Cairo, will meet alternatively in El Arish and in the southern Israeli city of Beersheeba.

Bomb Parcel Was Bound For Israel

FRANKFURT (AP) — A package that exploded in the mail terminal of Frankfurt's Rhein-Main Airport was on its way to Israel, officials said today.

A spokesman for the state attorney's office said the package that exploded Tuesday morning and injured 10 Lufthansa employees was one of seven parcels addressed to Tel Aviv.

Greece Primed To Join EEC

LUXEMBOURG (Reuter) — Greece and the European Economic Community (EEC) reached agreement today on terms under which Greece will become the 10th EEC member.

Greek Foreign Minister Georges Rallis told a news conference after the talks ended: "We will present a very good agreement to the Greek people. We will be an exemplary member of the community."

The agreement is expected to be signed in Athens on May 28 and Greece will join the EEC on Jan. 1, 1981.

Foreign Minister Jean-Francois Poncet of France, who conducted the year-long negotiations here for the EEC, said the nine Common Market members are satisfied with the agreement.

Sinai Oil Delivery Firmed

JERUSALEM (Reuter) — Israel will start receiving oil from Egypt a day after handing over wells in Sinai which it must give up under the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said today.

The Israeli leader made the announcement during a report to parliament on his two-day visit to Cairo which ended Tuesday.

The Sinai oilfields on the shores of the Gulf of Suez are due to be handed over to Egypt by June 26.

Israeli energy officials have said Egypt is committed to supply Israel indefinitely with oil equivalent to the amount the wells are yielding at the time Israeli gives them up.

The Neptune Oil Co., the U.S. concessionary working for Israel, has stepped up drilling even though it must hand over the operation after Israel leaves, Israeli sources said.

Israeli officials have said that by the time of the transfer the Sinai fields should be producing a quarter of Israel's needs.

Begin said Israel uses between eight million and nine million tons of oil a year.

Begin said the oil which Israel in the past obtained from Iran has been gradually replaced from other sources which he did not name.

Saudis Hike Prime

NEW YORK (AP) — Saudi Arabia, which has so far bucked the trend among Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) to tack large surcharges onto the price of oil, has increased the "quality differential" on some of its oil, industry sources said Tuesday.

But the sources emphasized that the price increase is not a surcharge and do not expect it to spread to the rest of Saudi production.

"That's really recognizing a quality difference," said an industry source. Experts said it is unlikely that the Saudis would increase the price of their other grades of oil.

The Saudis will charge $6.17 a barrel for their high-quality Arabian-berri-grade oil, which makes up about five per cent of Saudi Arabia's 9.5 million-barrel daily production.

The new price represents an increase in the quality premium of $1.15 a barrel in addition to the nine-per-cent increase in the base price of oil approved by OPEC last week.

Although OPEC sets a crude-oil base price — currently $14.54 a barrel — the cartel's members commonly add a quality differential onto the cost of better quality oil. The quality differential on Arabian prime oil had been 72 cents a barrel, and now is $1.87 a barrel.

When OPEC's members approved the increase in the base price last week, they allowed individual members to impose surcharges as they saw fit. Most OPEC members have added these surcharges, of anywhere from $1.20 to $2.50 a barrel, sometimes as part of increases in quality difference premiums. Saudi Arabia has said it is opposed to the surcharges

Second Rebellion Quashed in Iran

GONBAD-E-QABOUS, Iran (AP) — Regular government soldiers and pro-government guerrillas swept through this battle-torn northeastern town Tuesday as Turkoman rebels fled into the countryside. This apparently ended the second ethnic minority rebellion in less than a month.

About 1,800 soldiers and guerrillas began their move into the city's western sector Monday night, hours after a cease-fire was declared between predominantly Persian revolutionary militias and Turkoman tribesmen.

The Turkoman rebels, whose numbers have not been disclosed, apparently abandoned positions under cover of darkness, having escaped a ring of tanks and armored cars that surrounded the town.

The week of fighting cost at least 130 lives and injured more than 300, according to official estimates. Other casualty estimates had up to 100 killed. The injured were taken to the city's Gol-Cheshmeh Hospital after a government-arranged cease-fire Monday afternoon enabled warring parties to pick up their dead and injured from the town's streets.

Fighting between the Turkomans and the pro-government militias began eight days ago in a dispute over land rights and the Turkomans' demand for regional autonomy.

As scattered firing diminished in the town Tuesday, army units and pro-Islamic Mojahedeen guerrillas combed the city for rebel groups and arms caches. The Mojahdeen fought an underground battle for years against the monarchy of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, who is in exile following the revolution led by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini in February.

Army commanders, claiming Turkoman rebels were manipulated by "Communist agents," said they believed violence could erupt again in northeastern Iran, despite the apparent calm in this agricultural centre of about 60,000 inhabitants.

"The firepower we have been encountering in Gonbad in the past week has not been coming from amateur gunmen," said Ali Azizi, a Mojahedeen guerrilla leader.

Like the Kurds in the south who rebelled late last month, the Turkomans are predominantely Sunni Moslems. Khomeini's Islamic revolution has been carried out mainly by majority Shiite Moslems. But Khomeini has insisted that both sects and all religious minorities will be free in the new Iranian Islamic republic.

About 14 million of Iran's 31 million people belong to minority groups, the largest of which are Kurds, Baluchis and Turks.

Late last month Kurdish tribesmen in the western provincial city of Sanandaj fought government troops to support their demand for autonomy. The government announced limited home rule for the Kurds pending the establishment of a new national constitution, which would guarantee minority rights and presumably grant some autonomy.

The central government has accused "counter-revolutionaries" of fomenting ethnic unrest and one military officer in Gonbad-e-Qabous said he believed some of the arms used by Turkoman rebels may have come from the Soviet Union.

Soviet Fleet Seen off South Africa

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — A Soviet naval fleet was reported off southern Africa's Atlantic coast Tuesday in what Western diplomats speculated was a show of force aimed at stalled talks on South-West Africa.

Radio Angola, monitored here, reported that the fleet was on "navigation exercises" in the South Atlantic and that the aircraft carrier-cruiser Minsk was paying a courtesy visit in the port of Luanda, the Angolan capital.

A South African navy spokesman said it was aware of the presence of the fleet — comprising the Minsk, two guided-missile cruisers, an amphibious ship and an oiler — but said "we attach no significant importance to this latest convoy."

South Africa is at odds with the United Nations and Western powers, including the United States, over the future of South-West Africa, a vast territory it has administered since a 1920 mandate by the old League of Nations.

The arid but mineral-rich territory, also called Namibia, has a population of one million persons, mostly black, and was a German colony until the First World War.

The UN rescinded the 1920 mandate in 1966, but South Africa ignored the order. At about that time, black nationalist guerrillas of the South-West Africa People's Organization began their 12-year hit-and-run war against South African troops.

Angola, whose Marxist government came to power in a civil war after gaining independence from Portugal in 1976, provides forward bases for SWAPO guerrillas along its tense southern border with South-West Africa.

South African troops have made sporadic cross-border raids into Angola, using troops and planes to hit SWAPO bases.

Angolan officials claim some 19,800 Cuban troops, who helped President Agostinho Neto to power, remain in Angola to defend the country from a feared invasion by South Africa.

Airline Talks Resume

WASHINGTON (AP) — Talks resume today in a bid to end the strike which has grounded United Airlines.

The talks between United and striking machinists were scheduled for Tuesday — but union officials were delayed because of difficulty in getting cross-country flights.

United, the largest air carrier in the U.S., was shut down Saturday by the strike, which involves more than 18,000 members of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers. The airline normally carries about 130,000 passengers on 1,600 daily flights between more than 100 cities.

A company spokesman said Tuesday that all operations through April 12 now have been cancelled.

Library Sale Ads Stun Aldermen

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

Five Victoria aldermen today expressed shock over newspaper ads which offer the old library building at Yates and Blanshard for sale.

They said they have never been consulted about the sale and want to know what's going on.

Ald. Robin Blencoe said that the ads were authorized by Mayor Mike Young and Ald. Bob Wright. Neither was available for comment.

"I'm shocked and dismayed about this situation," said Blencoe. "There are seven other elected officials on this council who should have been consulted on what we want to do with that fine old building."

Blencoe said it was totally incorrect and arbitrary for the ads to appear before council had approved any sale.

He said Young and Wright apparently wanted to get some bids on the property so that when the matter came before council, aldermen would have been faced with some cold, hard figures.

But Blencoe said he and a other aldermen want to see the building utilized for city archives, a use that would provide no income.

"We may get some high bids (because of the ads), so we're going to be faced with having to compare a brief from the archives, which is non-profit, and an offer that could see the city making a million dollar profit. It's very unfair."

Ald. Murray Glazier said he too was surprised to see ads calling for bids on the Carnegie building.

"I want you to know I haven't been party to any decision to sell that building," said Glazier.

He said the building was given to the city around 1906 by Andrew Carnegie and it would be wrong to turn around and sell it for a large profit.

"I'm opposed to any commercial use of that building. It should be retained for public use . . . We've got a wonderful opportunity at that corner and it would be grossly unfortunate if we sold it."

Glazier said whe would like to see the 1950 addition to the building sold off, but the older structure, the original Carnegie building, kept by the city.

Both sections of the building are being vacated because the library is moving to new quarters.

Ald. Ron McKenzie said he was amazed to see newspaper ads offering the building for sale.

McKenzie said the matter should have come before council first.

"I feel the archives should be given first night of refusal and some preferance on this," he added.

Ald. Bill McElroy agreed, saying that the Carnegie building should be seperated from the newer addition, and utilized as an archives.

McElroy also criticised Young and Wright for authorizing the ads, saying the decision to offer the building for sale should have been left up to council.

Ald. John Hayes was shocked when he learned that the ads had not been approved by council.

"That's incredible. I assumed they'd done that at last week's special council meeting while I was away," he said.

Hayes said he wanted to look into the matter and get some explanations before making any furhter statements.

Remaining members of council who could not be reached for comment this morning were Ald. Bill Tindall and Larry Ryan.

Coffee Pot Fire

Victoria fire department officials feel an unattended coffee pot may have been responsible for a fire that broke out in an office building shortly before 8 this morning.

Fire officials said the fire that gutted RAE Investment Ltd.'s office at 193 Burnside East started in the coffee room.

"We're 90 per cent certain it was an accidental cause. It got started in the coffee area and we're going to be taking a close look at that," said a fire investigator.

At press time no estimate had been made on damages.

May 10 Vote in B.C.

BURGER OUTLET boost for Bill Bennett appears on sign on Douglas Street fast food outlet but owner Bob Beadnell says he just put it up for a lark. Beadnell says sign, being pointed to by passerby Ken Chubbe, is strictly for laughs and he doesn't anticipate losing any customers who may not share sign's sentiments. One NDP critic said sign's a real hot dog effort.

Premier Bill Bennett ended months of speculation Tuesday when he went on television to call a May 10 provincial election.

The vote comes just 12 days before the federal election.

Bennett, who had asked for five minutes of live television and radio coverage to make his announcement, ended up taking close to half an hour with a rambling, election-style speech in which he said it is time to redefine the philosophical differences between his party and the NDP.

See also page 17.

The 38-day campaign will be fought on B.C.'s right to manage its own resources and private versus public ownership, the premier said.

NDP leader Dave Barrett, who said he welcomes the election call, said his party sees the issues as unemployment, inflation and the cost of living — all things the party feels Bennett has failed to solve.

But NDP house leader Bill King (Revelstoke-Slocan) said Bennett is using the federal campaign as a smokescreen to confuse voters in hopes of picking up extra votes.

At dissolution, the Social Credit party held 34 seats, the NDP 18 and the Conservatives one. There were two vacant seats in the 55 seat legislature.

The new house will see 57 MLAs representing 51 ridings because of the changes in electoral boundaries approved by the legislature last spring.

Bennett's Socreds overthrew the 3½ year old NDP government in December, 1975, by picking up 49 per cent of the popular vote to the NDP's 39 per cent.

The Liberals and Tories together shared about 11 per cent of the vote.

Barrett, who was in Juneau speaking about his plan for a rail link through B.C. to Alaska, said Tuesday night the campaign can end the feeling of frustration and helplessness that prevails in B.C.

The NDP leader said B.C. needs leadership, vision and determination as well as a declaration that its premier will fight for all the people, not just the millionaires.

Bennett said there are indications the federal government wants more control over economic development and revenues from provincial resources.

"I would resist very strongly, on behalf of the people, any attempt by any government of any label in Ottawa to take over the resources of the people of B.C.," Bennett said.

He claimed that Barrett, while premier, had offered to relinquish control of B.C.'s resources if the federal government would bring them under national control.

"I believe the people of this province must make a decision on who is going to manage B.C. — whether it is going to be managed from Victoria, or Ottawa," Bennett said.

"Those who would turn over our resources, or those who would take them, must be given a clear message — the B.C. resources belong to the people of B.C."

Conservative leader Vic Stephens, his party's lone MLA, said he is delighted with the election call.

He sees his party like the Socreds in 1952 under W.A.C. Bennett coming from nowhere to form the government.

"If voters in B.C. were willing to do that once, they could well do it again," he said.

Stephens said the Socred claim of good fiscal management is a joke.

"They are the biggest spending, highest taxing government in the history of the province," he said, adding the government's $4.56 billion budget introduced Monday simply gave back to the people things that had been taken from them.

Bennett hinted strongly that if the people want to ensure they receive all the goodies in the budget, they had better return the Socred government to power.

The premier warned there's no telling what another government might do to the reduction in sales tax, increase in homeowner's grant and other tax benefits promised in the budget.

Barrett Rejects Terms

Williams resigned his Vancouver East seat in 1976 so Barrett could get re-elected in a byelection.

Barrett, asked about Bennett's conditional challenge, said the premier is afraid to face him one-to-one.

The premier claims Williams is still a power in the NDP backrooms and has claimed in recent weeks that Kinnaird is the real leader of the NDP.

Barrett said he would love to meet the premier face-to-face but with no preconditions.

"If the premier is afraid to meet me face-to-face, let him say so."

Asked later if he is afraid to meet Barrett alone, Bennett said he was giving Barrett the opportunity to have a three-to-one advantage.

"He (Barrett) shouldn't come into the debate alone because I am not confident he understands BCRIC (the free share giveaway in the B.C. Resources Investment Corp.) from his conflicting statements."

Williams said he can't understand why he has been invited because he is now a private citizen, not a politician.

"The last thing I want to do is try and get into the maze of the premier's mind."

The former resources minister said he has no intention of seeking a seat this time around.

NDP House leader Bill King suggested tongue-in-cheek that Bennett bring along Bob Sommers and Jack Davis. Both are former Social Credit cabinet ministers who have been convicted of criminal offenses.

Davis resigned his seat in September, but has since won re-nomination.

Saanich Stalemate Slammed

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Greater Victoria industrial development commissioner Barry Mayhew departed from his usual non-political stance Tuesday by calling for the defeat of four "obstructionist" Saanich aldermen at the earliest opportunity.

Mayhew said until the four — John Mika, Howard Sturrock, Irene Block and Mary Casilio — are defeated, there will be no significant economic growth in the municipality.

"The four automatically oppose every development proposal, no matter how reasonable it is," he said.

"Saanich council will be stalemated as long as they are there. People who want economic development in Saanich should vote them out of office."

Mayhew made the statement in a speech to the Victoria Electric Club at the Crest Harbourview Inn.

He said his remarks were made "out of frustration — the obstruction of Saanich council is one of the frustrations I face in my job."

Mayhew said he normally does not make political statements but felt the time had come to speak out because all his efforts in Saanich are being thwarted by the inactivity of Saanich council.

Particularly disappointing, he said, was the defeat of the Royal Oak and Interurban Road industrial park proposals, plus the litigation holding up the Minnie Mountain housing project in Ten Mile Point.

Mayhew said the four aldermen automatically oppose any devlopment proposal.

"Saanich council is completely stalemated."

Mayhew did not name the aldermen during his speech but in an interview later he said he would not hesitate to do so.

"I was referring to John Mika, of course, he is the main obstructionist. And I was also referring to Irene Block, Howard Sturrock and Mary Casilio. They vote as a group and they are against everything."

He said the other four aldermen, Geoff Vantreight, Fred Severson, Dave Paterson and Sandy Noel, bring forward development ideas but each one is blocked by the anti-development faction.

He said Mika and the other three aldermen insist that all decisions must be subject to local veto.

Mayhew said there are times when issues are so important to a large number of people that the wishes of local citizens have to be overridden for the benefit of the whole community.

He said the anti-development bloc refuses to accept this principle and that is what led to the defeat of the Royal Oak industrial park.

During his speech, Mayhew said he was concentrating on bringing basic industries to Victoria. These are industries that export goods and bring new money into the community.

Most of Victoria's industries are in the service sector and they merely circulate money that is already here. It was important to bring in new money with non-polluting, high technology industries and that is why obtaining an industrial park site is so important.

An existing industrial zone of 14 acres behind the Red Lion Inn has land for sale at $14 a square foot, compared with less than $2 a square foot for similar land in Richmond and Surrey, he said.

The Victoria land is so expensive because there are few industrial sites here. The price will stay high until additional industrial parks are opened. Then land prices would fall because of the competition and more companies would be interested in coming here.

Audits Urged For Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — A royal commission has recommended that the government submit annual five-year financial plans to Parliament as a first step in fighting a "grave weakening in the chain of accountability" within the government and to taxpayers.

The Royal Commission on Financial Management and Accountability concluded in its final report, released Tuesday, that control over government spending is so ineffective it poses a serious threat to the economy.

The inquiry was set up by Prime Minister Trudeau in 1976 after Auditor-General J.J. Macdonell warned: "Parliament — and indeed the government — has lost or is close to losing effective control of the public purse."

The commission, headed by Allen Lambert, 68-year old former chairman of the Toronto Dominion Bank, offers an equally harsh indictment:

"After two years of careful study and consideration, we have reached the deeply held conviction that the serious malaise pervading the managment of government stems fundamentally from a grave weakening, and in some cases an almost total breakdown in the chain of accountatility, first within the government and second in the accountaitlity of government to Parliament and utlimately to the Canadian people."

The 586-page report calls for a major restructuring of the government and the initiation of medium-term fiscal plans to help regain control over the spending and management of some 400 federal departments and agencies. The commission makes 165 recommendations.

French Power Now Accepted - Trudeau

Times News Services

Prime Minister Trudeau tried to reassure Quebecers Tuesday night in Rimouski that "French power" is finally being accepted across the country and the province should not feel forced to leave Confederation.

(More federal campaign reports on page 47).

The Liberals fared badly in the 1972 federal election campaign because English Canadians "believed there was too much French power," Trudeau recalled.

Although the Liberals won the 1972 election, they did badly outside Quebec and formed a minority government.

But now English Canadians are willing to give French equal status to English, and some premiers have agreed to enshrine linguistic rights in the constitution, he said.

In the Creditiste stronghold of Eastern Quebec Trudeau wound up offending some of the rural voters he was courting.

A remark Trudeau made about "grumbling" farmers earned him the first boos of his Quebec campaign at a junior college in the riding of Kamouraska-Riviere-du-Loup.

Meanwhile, also campaigning in Quebec, Conservative leader Joe Clark said Tuesday that Trudeau had helped foster separatist sentiments in the province.

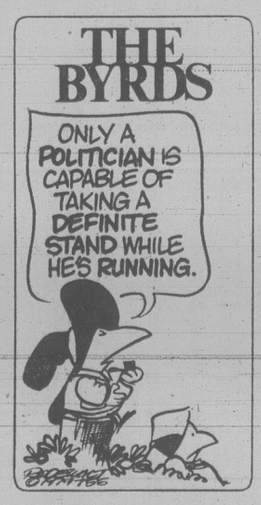
In two television interviews during a day-long election campaign visit here, Clark said he thinks Trudeau made it tougher for federalist forces to mount a campaign against the Parti Quebecois referendum on independence expected in the fall.

The Progressive Conservative leader described Trudeau as "the odd man out" in the history of Canada. All prime ministers had some trouble dealing with premiers but Trudeau had fought all 27 premiers he dealt with during his 11 years in office.

NDP Leader Ed Broadbent issued an election pitch to women in Edmonton Tuesday with a proposal that would impose hiring quotas on government and employers getting government business.

The New Democratic Party leader also called for reinstatement of $3 million in annual job-related services to women that the Liberal government recently cut and proposed other measures to propell women to equality in the work force.

Broadbent announced his election pledges at a news conference after a speech and question-and-answer session at the University of Alberta.



Bhutto Hanging Sparks Rioting

Times News Services

RAWALPINDI — Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, who ruled Pakistan for five turbulent years and refused to beg for his life after his overthrow, was hanged for 30 obligatory minutes today and quickly buried by the military regime.

Bloody riots broke out in India's Kashmir province and club-swinging police broke up groups of angry, chanting demonstrators in the streets here hours after the hanging.

A spokesman for Canadian Pakistanis said in Toronto the hanging of Bhutto will set an example for politicians in that part of the world.

"If they misuse the powers of state, they should be prepared for the consequences," said Haider Khan, president of the Federation of Pakistani Associations.

Socreds To Lose TV Time

Premier Bill Bennett's TV time on CBC Tuesday to announce the May 10 provincial election will be deducted from the Socred party's free time campaign coverage by the station.

Director Len Lauk said the premier's 21-minute statement was partisan in nature and therefore the first political broadcast of the campaign.

In the interests of fairness and balance, the time taken should be deducted from the party's overall coverage, he said.

The premier went live on both CBC and B.C. Television at 6 p.m., the normal starting time for the evening newscasts by both networks.

The premier's office had indicated that the election statement would only take five minutes and because he spoke for more than 20 minutes, the stations' normal scheduling was disrupted.

Lauk said the 15-minute difference between projected and actual time taken by the premier was "unusual."

"I'm sure it was inadvertant."

Asked why he took so long, Bennett replied: "I've never called an election before."

BIG AID TO BLIND PROGRAMMER

A Typewriter That Talks In French-Oriental Accent

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Errol Hembroff has a talking typewriter that speaks with a French-oriental accent.

He finds it an invaluable aid to his work at the B.C. Systems Corp. where he is a computer programmer.

And the peculiar intonation doesn't bother him a bit as the machine he helped design spells words out audibly using synthesized speech.

For Hembroff, who is blind, has the first Spellex III attachment, an instrument assembled to his specifications at the University of B.C. electrical engineering department.

What it does is vocalize words and numerals from the paper readout on his electronic typewriter, giving him instant replay without having to take his hands off the keys.

The work was undertaken by Dr. Michael Beddoes — assisted by technician Mark Bunte — who has pioneered synthesized speech in B.C. and is now working on the development of a talking Opticon machine for the blind or persons with reading or vision deficiencies.

"The beauty of this machine for a blind person," Hembroff explained to a group of sightless visitors to Canadian National Institute for the Blind, "... you have no ambiguity because the translation can't jump a line. It's more efficient than an Opticon.

"I can't sing the praises of this too highly for anyone involved in the computer interface if he's visually handicapped."

The machine gives "instant visibility of what you have just typed," Hembroff said.

Each letter, symbol or numeral in synthesized speech is supposed to be a distinct sound, although there are some that are inevitably confused, like "m" and "n", "b" and "v", or "seven" and "semi" (for semi-colon).

Hembroff's acute hearing has no trouble distinguishing the individual sounds, spoken in a clipped, flat, robot-like voice.

Hembroff said the reason for the odd accent is that the graduate student helping Beddoes was of Chinese descent and passed his pronunciation along when storing the language in the computer.

Hembroff uses the Texas Instruments Silent 700 typewriter (about $2,500) to talk to the computer, and the computer answers, giving information about the programs in its memory bank.

Spellex ($1,000) acts as go-between, with electronic circuitry, backup and speedup switches, a 240-character memory and a small loudspeaker or headphones for the operator.

Hembroff said he was describing his machine this week to a meeting of blind data processors at a Seattle seminar where he was also giving a paper on compiling manuals for blind operators.

He said the Opticon reader, using a lens and photoelectric cell to convert letters to impulses, has difficulty following some conventional page layouts.

Love is love in any language. So too is warmth and hospitality, but what about understanding?

That was the underlying theme — international understanding in this Year of the Child — in a beautiful concert I attended Saturday night at Pearson College of the Pacific.

Oh sure, Monday was the royal night when anyone who is anyone packed in with Prince Charles to watch the show. Saturday was for the peasants and what was shared that night was a wonderfully warm experience.

Tremendous talent burst forth from these children of the world. Music ranging from jazz to classical piano, folk dances from every different culture and each one introduced by words of wisdom from men like Tolstoy, Lester Pearson, Einstein and Kahlil Gibran.

"Why is man so callous?" asked one of the readers. "There is not enough love in our hearts," answered the other. "So many of us are afraid — we are afraid of our parents, we are afraid of our teachers and we are afraid of our boss. So life is lived in fear and darkness. That is why man is callous."

Love bloomed at Pearson College on Saturday night, though, with a marvellous feeling of oneness with the world running through it all. And when the show was over the students poured from the stage into the audience with a daffodil for each of us and an invitation to stay for coffee and friendship.

Meet Pearson College, the evening was called, and among those taking the students up on their offer were Rev. Ron Johnstone and some of his Garden City United Church parishioners.

A few months ago, I wrote of Rev. Ron's international experiment of having Pearson College students of two different nationalities speak at the church service one Sunday a month for six months. Well, that experiment ends next Sunday when Jacqueline Leong of Singapore and Caroline Jaruga of Papua-New Guinea will be the guests. But it won't end there, if the minister has his way. He's so delighted with the response from the church-goers and the feelings that have grown between them and the students, he wants to see it become an annual affair.

On each of the International Sundays, families who go to the United Church have acted as hosts to the students. But what began with a meal grew into something much more. Many have moments they'll long cherish.

Like Jenny Malmsten, one of several who adopted students for three weeks over Christmas, who had South American students at her home during the holidays and, because they were from three different time zones, ended up celebrating three New Year's Eves!

Like Pat O'Keefe and his wife Rae who, though they have three children of their own and a foster child, had Jorge Del Rio of Colombia with them for three weeks at Christmas.

"I think we've adopted another son," said Rae.

"We also heard of a boy from Africa who was going to be spending Christmas alone so we invited him for the day and ended up with a truly international table," she added.

Then there was Phyllis Morley whose Palestinian refugees became "refugees in Canada" and sought the asylum of friendship with her.

When Pearson College broke for a week's work experience, the job offer for Baher Al-Ashab fell through and he had nowhere to go.

"I invited him to stay with me for the week," said Phyllis. "But I ended up with three students!"

Anis Kanaan, another Palestinian refugee, had gone to the U.S. to see his brother that week but the immigration officials wouldn't let him stay.

"He landed back at the bus depot where he was going to spend the night but I told him to come to my home, too," Phyllis said. "Then Evelyne De Ryck of Belgium, who had been staying in a youth hostel, ran out of money and phoned Baher. So I told her to come along, as well. They brought their sleeping bags and it was a happy time for all of us."

Actually, Baher was hosted by Ed and Daisy Dack after his church speech and he gave them introductions to his sister and brother-in-law who live in Jerusalem. When the Dacks made a recent trip to the Holy Land they were feted and showered with beautiful gifts by the grateful student's relatives.

"It has been a joy and a privilege to have got to know these young people from Pearson College," said Rev. Ron who has found the inspiration for more than one sermon from their ability to understand and to share, no matter what their religion.

"We have done very little for the young people but they have done much for us," he said. "They have challenged us to open our minds to understanding, our homes to hospitality and our hearts to love."

Mitchell Nomination Upheld 17-0

The Big Scramble Starts to Complete Island Slates

The executive of the provincial NDP constituency of Esquimalt-Port Renfrew Tuesday night voted 17-0 to uphold the controversial one-vote nomination victory of Frank Mitchell over John Brewin.

A spokesman for Brewin said today a decision will be made Thursday about whether an appeal will be lodged with the provincial executive of the party.

Mitchell won the nomination March 25 when meeting chairman Bill Doneley voted twice, once as a delegate and later to break a 225-225 tie.

Doneley argued he was entitled to vote twice under Robert's Rules of Order.

At a stormy meeting Tuesday night at Dominion Hall, the constituency executive heard debate from supporters of Mitchell and Brewin and were particularly interested in reports from experts on Robert's Rules of Order.

Contituency president Marlene Eddy said today it was demonstrated that a chairman can vote twice under certain circumstances.

The first vote was as a delegate and in the form of a ballot. The chairman cannot cast a second ballot but he may verbally declare a winner in the event of a tie.

"This is the procudure followed by many unions and we had a number of people who told us this was also in accordance with Robert's Rules of Order."

In addition, she said, a letter from Nanaimo MLA Dave Stupich was read to the meeting. In the letter, Stupich upheld the nominational of Mitchell as being within the rules as outlined prior to the start of the nominating meeting.

Stupich was at the nominating meeting.

Mrs. Eddy said the matter is closed as far as the constituency executive is concerned following the unanimous vote, although supporters of Brewin could still, if they wish, lodge an appeal to the provincial executive.

She said she was "surprised, shocked" by the unanimous vote of the executive because debate had taken more than four hours and became heated on several occasions.

Already nominated for the Esquimalt-Port Renfrew riding are sitting Socred MLA Lyle Kahl and Conservative Bill Langlois.

Nominations already completed for other Vancouver Island ridings:

VICTORIA (two seats): No nominations, although Socred Sam Bawlf is likely to be nominated and both Mayor Mike Young and former mayor Peter Pollen have been mentioned as possible running mates. The Socred nominating meeting will be held April 16 at 8 p.m. at the McPherson Playhouse. The NDP likely will nominate MLA Charles Barber while John Shields of the Labor Council and school trustee Mark Fisher may seek the second spot.

SAANICH AND THE ISLANDS: Conservatives have nominated John Green, executive assistant of party leader Stephens. Socreds are likely to nominated the sitting member Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis. Saanich Ald. John Mika is seeking the NDP nomination.

COMOX: NDP MLA Karen Sanford will be opposed by Socred Delbert Doll and Tory Rick Kello.

Nurserymen 'Undermined' By the Feds

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

A charge that the federal Agricultural Research Centre in Central Saanich is undermining nurserymen by selling potted chrysanthemum on the open market was denied today by director Dr. Joseph M. Molnar.

The centre's price was $1.50 per potted plant, he said. The commercial wholesale price of a six-inch potted chrysanthemum is $3.

"The research centre should not complete with people earning a living from flowers," MacIntosh said.

"We are not opposed to the centre selling, providing the sale is advertised and the plants sold by auction," he said.

But Molnar said only 200 potted plants are involved and 125 have been sold.

"They are only three inches high, not six inches," he said. "We also didn't decorate the pots like the growers do. So the plants were not a give-away — not under-priced."

He said the plants were grown for a nutrition study and were not destroyed at the end of the research program because of a government policy against wasting taxpayers' dollars.

"So we sell them and return the money to the Treasury," he said.

He said the centre is also undertaking a sales research study, and this is why the plants were not sold by auction.

"It wouldn't be worth making the study if we sold them by auction because of trouble and time involved in finding and making arrangements with the purchaser," he said.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. My wife and I are going to England this summer and are in the process of getting passports. As a matter of interest, could you tell us how passports first began and how? F.A.

A. The earliest legislation in passports appears to be an act by Henry V which mentions safe conducts in 1414. The earliest passport still extant was one issued on June 18, 1641, and signed by Charles I. The last personally-signed passport by a monarch — George III — was issued in March, 1794, to a Robert Liston. Before 1858 British passports were issued in French. Photographs were introduced in 1914.

Relief Proposed In 'Blockbusting'

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier wants to see homeowners along a seven-block strip of Shelbourne reap some cash compensation for a planning decision years ago which sent their properties, financially and esthetically, on a steady downhill slide.

Couvelier suggested Tuesday night Saanich should atone for its treatment of the residents by prezoning their properties to apartment use so that they, rather than developers or speculators, can benefit from the enhanced land values.

"We have been guilty by virtue of a former planning decision (to make Shelbourne a major traffic artery) of blockbusting," he told the public works committee.

"The effect has been to continue to reduce property values on Shelbourne to the point where developers will acquire them, knock them down and then come to council with redevelopment proposals."

The mayor said the process has already started and he cannot see any way of halting it.

"But I am concerned that the existing residents, the ones who have taken it on the chin all these years, should benefit in some way as some small recompense for a decision by previous councils."

The committee accepted his suggestion that the matter be discussed in detail by council's planning committee.

Couvelier said today he is not an advocate of pre-zoning the entire municipality, but in the case of the Shelbourne strip between North Dairy and Pear he believes council should zone the land two lots deep, on both sides of the road, for its eventual, logical use as apartments.

He said he has been inside a number of older homes in the area and they show obvious signs of physical deterioration from traffic vibration, including cracked foundations and loosened windows.

In addition, property values have declined substantially and many older residents have moved out, to be replaced by transient occupants who have allowed the properties to become unkempt.

Couvelier said no one can deny the present situation is directly the fault of former Saanich planning policies.

"We let Shelbourne happen," he added. "With some foresight we could have done a number of things to avert this problem, including making Shelbourne and Cedar Hill one-way roads, or upgrading Richmond to relieve traffic pressure on Shelbourne."
